CONGRESS.

ANGRY DEBATE IN THE HOUSE.

Collision Between Illinois Members Prevented with Difficulty.

THE THIRD BALLOT FOR SPEAKER.

The Plurality Rule Proposed.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 9.

Senators crowded the Hall of the House to-day to hear the continuation of the debate which has taken so wide a range.

Yesterday the members from Ohio had things all their own way, to-day Illinois had the floor. The maiden speech of Mr. LOGAN, Anti-Lecompton Democrat, was much complimented.

One ballot for Speaker was had, and Mr. SHERMAN'S vote fell two short of what was anticipated. Had it reached one hundred and twelve there were five other members ready to unite and effect an election.

The resolution of Mr. HICKMAN, of Pennsylvania, Anti-Lecompton Democrat, proposing the plurality rule, is an exact copy of that under which BANKS was elected, and will be passed whenever a vote can be had on it, which may be on Monday.

Mr. MAYNARD, (South American,) of Tennessee, will, as soon as opportunity offers, perhaps to-morrow, present a resolution declaring Mr. PHELPS, of Missouri, temporary Speaker of the House. All of the Southern Opposition is expected to support it, and hopes are entertained that it will be passed.

It is rumored that the President will send his message to Congress on Tuesday, whether an organization shall be effected by that time or not.

It is not true that Gen. SCOTT will await further instructions at San Francisco regarding the San Juan dispute. None will be sent him. The instructions which have already been forwarded direct him to join Gen. TOTTEN, in California, and with that officer to make an examination of Lake Point, with a view to determine whether it will be advantageous to fortify it. This Point and its purchase has been a subject of much discussion.

It is stated on high authority that England will take no part in the European Congress, unless its object be to secure liberty to the Central States of Italy. The explanations which have been made to England by Spain are regarded as ample, as neither the fortifications or the Straits of Gibraltar are t hreatened.

Q.

[FROM THE REPORTER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 9.

Only a proof copy of the President's Message has yet been printed, and that is in his own possession.

It is said the Democratic Senators were in conference this afternoon, to arrange the Standing Committees. They will be nearly the same as those of last session, and will have to be voted on by the Senate.

Mr. HICKMAN, in the House, will again endeavor, to-morrow, to press the adoption of the plurality rule to effect the election of a Speaker, but at this stage of proceedings there does not seem any prospect of its adoption, as the opponents of Mr. SHERMAN will vigorously resist its introduction.

The Commissioner of Patents has appointed Prof. JELLSON, of Columbian College, in this District, as Librarian of the Patent Office, vice Dr. TURNER, deceased.

Some damage was done to BROWN'S Hotel to-night, owing to a defective fire-flue. At one time the entire building was considered to be in imminent danger. Great excitement prevailed amongst members of Congress and the guests, the larger part of whom had their baggage removed, but afterwards returned to their quarters.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Dec. 9.

Mr. MORRIS, of Illinois, (Anti-Lecompt. Dem.,) rising to a privileged question, caused to be read from the official report of the remarks of Mr. KELLOGG that two years ago Mr. GREELEY was planning and scheming with Senator DOUGLAS in the parlor of the latter, to reelect him Senator by holding out the politics of Illinois.

Mr. MORRIS also caused to be read Mr. GREELEY'S publication denying the truth of the charge, and while detesting Mr. DOUGLAS' doctrines, admiring his pluck.

Mr. KELLOGG, of Illinois, (Rep.,) replied that but for the fact that he had been personally assailed in an infamous article in the Tribune, he would not have said a word, as he was anxious for an organization. He said that HORACE GREELEY and Judge DOUGLAS had been put on trial, and gave notice that he should hereafter prosecute the issue.

Mr. CLARK, of Missouri, (Dem.,) was called out by a remark of Mr. KELLOGG that a report had prevailed that according to arrangement the Missouri Senatorship was to be given to Mr. BLAIR. He believed this charge against Mr. DOUGLAS was a falsehood, but he did not attach importance to the statement of GREELEY, who he believed a thief, and of a character unworthy the notice of gentlemen in or out of Congress.

Mr. KELLOGG repeated, as an issue had been made, he would meet it fairly. He disclaimed having made any attack on DOUGLAS. He dealt with GREELEY.

Mr. LOGAN, of Illinois, (Anti-Lecompton Dem.,) said the charge was made to injure Mr. DOUGLAS, who is the candidate for the Presidency of the great Northwest. The effort was to depreciate Mr. DOUGLAS in the estimation of the South, by associating him with Mr. GREELEY. From this time he would never again notice his colleague, who shrinks from the responsibility of bringing forward proofs in support of his charges. When he (LOGAN) made a charge in the Legislature of Illinois, and was called on for proof, he did not, like a spaniel, slink into a corner.

At this point Mr. KELLOGG, who was sitting near Mr. LOGAN, deliberately advanced toward him, as if with hostile intention. LOGAN perceiving the movement, put himself in an attitude for combat. Gentlemen at once sprung to the scene, some seizing LOGAN and others restraining KELLOGG. There was very much excitement and members all over the Hall were in agitation.

The Clerk, amid the din and stirring events, loudly called to order, and requested gentlemen to take their seats, and soon the two Illinois gentlemen were widely separated.

Mr. LOGAN resumed. He said he was perfectly cool.

Mr. MORRIS, of Pennsylvania, (Ind.,) called for the Sergeant-at-arms. Order was after a while restored.

Mr. TAYLOR, of Louisiana, (Dem.,) said it was time such proceedings should cease. [Applause.] The time had arrived when this species of discussion, which could lead to nothing but irritation, should terminate and the representatives of the people should proceed to an election quietly and decently. They should have some competent person to preserve order.

Mr. LOGAN said he had yielded the floor only for a moment. Gentlemen need have no apprehension of a difficulty between his colleague and himself. [Hisses.]

Mr. TAYLOR said they should have an organization, and then there would be an opportunity to discuss all these matters in order. The interruption, had it not been instantly quieted, would have terminated in a permanent interruption, and perhaps in an adjournment, if it had not been for the interposition of the friends of the respective gentlemen from Illinois. [Applause.]

Mr. LOGAN remarked if he was to be hissed, he would merely say that he had as many rights here to be respected as any one else. [Applause.]

Mr. BARR, of New-York, (Dem.,) said that the applause should be made to cease by the clearing of the galleries.

Mr. GROW, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) hoped they would first stop it on the floor.

Mr. BURNETT, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) remarked that when it was charged that the galleries were responsible, he said that the example of applause was set by the Republicans on the floor. [Applause in the galleries.] He wanted the responsibility to fall where it belonged.

Mr. FARNSWORTH, of Illinois (Rep.,) did not want this hall converted into a bear-garden.

Mr. MAYNARD, of Tennessee, (South American,) said there were no means to prevent the applause and hissing until a presiding officer was elected.

Mr. LOGAN resumed his remarks, and eulogised in high terms the character of Mr. DOUGLAS, and pronounced the charge against him false in every respect.

Mr. MCCLERNAND, of Illinois, (Dem.,) produced a letter from Mr. DOUGLAS, who branded the charge as false.

Mr. LOGAN commented on the action of the Republican party in Illinois in terms of reprobation. He alluded to the fact that in Chicago a meeting had been held sympathising with JOHN BROWN, and no Republican raised his voice against it. In conclusion, he addressed a few remarks to the Anti-Lecompton Democrats, urging them to act with the Democratic Party, and let past issues be buried in oblivion.

Mr. CLARK of New-York, (Anti-Lecompton Dem.)—Will the gentleman inform me whether he approves the Territorial policy of the present Administration?

Mr. LOGAN—I repeat, let past issues be buried in oblivion. You know the position taken by Mr. DOUGLAS, in Illinois, and you know he was triumphantly elected. That is enough.

Mr. CLARK—Will the Democratic nominee for Speaker, if elected, so organize the Committees that Kansas shall be admitted without restriction.

Mr. LOGAN—I never asked him that question. It never entered into my mind. I have entire confidence in the Democratic nominee.

Mr. HASKIN, of New-York, (Anti-Lecompton Democrat,) inquired whether, in case the Charleston Convention should adopt a platform in opposition to the views of Mr. DOUGLAS, and if that Convention indorsed and approved the conduct of this Administration, as well with regard to its Kansas policy as all other matters, he would support the nominee of that Convention?

Mr. LOGAN replied that he was about twenty-eight years old, and had lived long enough to discover that the Democratic Party never does wrong. [Laughter.] He had never known the Democratic Party in National Convention to indorse a platform that was not consistent with his views. Having that confidence, he would not anticipate what they might do, but would say he would vote for the nominee of that Convention anyhow. [Expressions of delight on the Democratic side of the House.]

Mr. HASKIN—I will not. I will ask another question. Does the gentleman believe that the Territorial Legislature of Kansas could exclude Slavery or abolish it?

Mr. LOGAN—I profess to be a Democrat—neither Lecompton, nor Anti-Lecompton. As I have said, I have buried all old party issues—I claim to be a Democrat. I am for STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS for President of the United States, first, last, and all the time. If he is not nominated, I am for the next man—that is the man who is nominated. [Applause.]

Mr. HASKIN asked whether he would sustain the nominee if the platform resolved to protect Slavery in the Territories.

Mr. LOGAN—Wait till the Democratic platform does that, and I will tell you.

Mr. HASKIN said—At the last session of Congress the Republican members of the House put themselves squarely on the Anti-Lecompton Platform. He was in favor of the organization of the House, and had opposed all this rambling debate. He held in perfect abhorrence the appeals made to him to come to the support of those who sustain the infamous policy of this Administration with reference to the admission of Kansas. He would never vote for any man for Speaker, who voted for the Lecompton policy of this Administration, or who approves of its corrupt action, and its proscription as well in Illinois as elsewhere. Mr. HASKIN, in reply to a question whether he would vote for the Republican candidate, said he would vote for any gentleman on this side the House who comes nearer to my platform than the gentleman on the other side who voted for the Lecompton Constitution. I say further, I will do all in my power to prevent the organization of this House by the election of the Administration candidate.

Mr. LOGAN said he came here a Democrat, and expected to support a Democrat. He had differed from childhood from the Republicans, and would never affiliate with them.

Mr. HASKIN—If this Republican side of the House affiliate with me I shall be most happy to receive their support. I came here as an independent man, with no collar around my neck. If the Republicans put themselves on the popular sovereignty doctrine, which believe in, opposing the infamous extravagance and gross corruption of this Administration, I would sooner coöperate with them than with those who go with the gentlemen of the South in supporting a fraudulent Constitution for the purpose of bringing a Slave State into the Union.

Mr. FLORENCE, of Pennsylvania, (Dem.,) said he would take occasion at another time to answer his friend in regard to the corruptions of the Administration, of which he had spoken.

Mr. STANTON, of Ohio, (Rep.,) obtained the floor, but was willing to yield it if the House desired to proceed to the immediate election of a Speaker, provided he could subsequently have the floor.

Mr. WINSLOW, of North Carolina, (Dem.,) with that view, moved that the House now proceed to the election of Speaker. Agreed to.

THE DEBATE OF THURSDAY.

Chances of the Contest for Speakership—Effect of the Plurality Rule—An Estimate of the Comparative Strength of Parties.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 8, 1859.

The country will soon become wearied with the unprofitable and exciting debate which is now progressing in the national Legislature, and which bids fair to continue for some time to come, as every man seems not only determined to speak himself, but by persistent catechising, to draw out the views of every other member, upon every imaginable topic. The debate itself, is not only an unrestrained "free fight," but a similar license is accorded to the galleries, which keep up an almost constant clapping of hands, and stamping of feet, in applause of this man or that, as each one says something of the "spread eagle" order to "bring down the house." Wit is evidently at a premium and, to-day, the crowded galleries, gave unmistakable signs of their hearty enjoyment of the bon mots of Mr. CORWIN, of Ohio, who, for nearly two hours, kept the House in a roar of laughter with his good humor and happy hits at all the struggling elements now operating to prevent an organization of the House. He professed to state the honest position of the Republican Party, and in doing so made it out the only conservative, Union-loving, constitutional party of the country. He distinguished, however, between the Republicans of the West and the Republicans of the North. The great West, now numbering nine millions of souls, would check the extremeists of the North as well as of the South, and preserve intact our free institutions. Members of all parties crowded around Mr. CORWIN during his speech, and many of them propounded questions, all of which were answered with infinite good humor. Senators, too, thronged around, and seemed deeply interested in the remarks of the distinguished speaker, but the Republicans of the House were evidently chagrined at the exhibition, as many of them thought the speech calculated to injure rather than to benefit them. The platform of Mr. CORWIN was rather too conservative to suit, perhaps, some of their constituents; and was, therefore, calculated to distract the Republican organization. The rejoinder of Hon. S. S. Cox was characteristic of that gentleman, and presented the Republican Party of Ohio in a different dress. How doctors will disagree!

A motion was prepared and ready to be submitted to-day for the adoption of the plurality rule, but party policy dictated a postponement for a while longer, and the member, at the solicitation of friends, withheld it. It would not surprise me, however, if an Anti-Lecompton Democrat should move in the matter to-morrow. It is still understood that the eight Anti-Lecompton gentlemen will vote for the plurality, which, with the Republican vote, will carry it. This is the only possible chance for electing a Speaker.

But should the plurality rule be adopted, which party has the advantage? The Republicans may be able to cast their whole vote, 113. The Democrats, by a union of the Southern opposition, can reach 110. There would still be left a balance of power sufficien to determine the result in favor of either party. Thus it is seen the Republicans might possibly lose the organization even under the plurality rule, a fact which they well understand, but as it is morally certain they can never elect by the majority, they are willing to take the chances under the other rule.

The Democrats believe they have so crippled Mr. SHERMAN that he will be forced to retire, and that the Republicans will have to select another standard-bearer. In this the Democratic side of the House is altogether in error. Mr. SHERMAN will remain the Republican candidate for the Speakership, and, in the end, be elected to that responsible position, in spite of his indorsement of the Impending Crisis. No one, as far as I can learn, has ever questioned the fact that either Mr. BOCOCK or Mr. SHERMAN would make an excellent presiding officer. The protracted contest is purely political, and whether resulting in favor of the one or the other, the country may rest assured that the Speaker will be worthy of the high trust reposed in him.

Mr. Corwin's Speech.

From the Constitution.

Mr. THOMAS CORWIN, at a late hour in the afternoon of yesterday, rose in his place in the House of Representatives to defend his party, and plead rather in mitigation of punishment than in proof of innocence. We listened to that speech with great interest, and no small degree of astonishment. We heard that gentleman disavow for himself and his associates—and no one of them dissented—the doctrines which Mr. SEWARD has uttered in the Senate of the United States, at Rochester, and elsewhere. We heard him deny that Mr. SEWARD was the leader of the Black Republican Party. We heard him claim for that party a steady devotion to the Constitution and the Union and the rights of the South. We heard him repudiate HELPER, and ridicule his doctrines; and, with an effrontery which no other man possesses or could assume, we heard him implore those members of the House who have opposed, do oppose, and, we hope, ever will oppose, Black Republicans of every hue and form, to believe his advocacy, and withdraw their indictment. Nay, more, Mr. CORWIN asked the non-Black Republican members of Congress to believe that the papers which the world has hitherto believed to be the special organs of Black Republicanism were not the true exponents of the principles of that party. In short, if Mr. CORWIN is correct, every opinion that the Black Republicans have formed and avowed about themselves, and which others have entertained and expressed concerning them, is entirely erroneous.

The Late G. G. Poindexter.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Wednesday, Dec. 7, 1859.

DEAR SIR: Under the heading "Cutting a Hard Knot," in your paper of to-day, I notice Mr. G. G. POINDEXTER spoken of as "past middle life, not under the influence of youthful fire," &c. This suggested to me the idea of sending you for publication an article taken from the Brunswick Telegraph, a paper edited in the place where he was at college.

I was a classmate of POINDEXTER, and remember him as being particularly modest in his demeanor and amiable in social life. He had the reputation of being the best writer in his class, and an excellent scholar.

He was generally beloved in College, and will be recalled with much affection and sorrow by numerous friends here at the North.

Please insert in your paper this brief tribute of a friend to one who seemed, a short time ago, all that was gentle and kind, though now his name is notorious from his melancholy death.

Respectfully, yours, O. O. H.

The following is the paragraph referred to:

From the Brunswick (Me.,) Telegraph.

GEORGE GILMORE POINDEXTER was a graduate of Bowdoin College, of the class of 1850. I knew him well. He came to Brunswick a beardless boy, and remained at the North during the whole of his College course, spending his vacations sometimes in Brunswick, and sometimes with classmates, who were happy to have him accompany them home. In College he was acknowledged as a very talented young man, and was remarkable for his social qualities, which made him the favorite of the social circle. We well remember his commencement part, which was an English poem, entitled, "The Vision of the Saxon Seer." The subject was a poetical one, and its execution was worthy of a true poet. He touched the lyre and the music came. His part was one of the last performed on commencement day; the house was filled to its utmost capacity; the weather was hot and sultry; the audience were tired with hearing good things, and it was a sorry chance for one to gain a hearing; amid the flutter of fans, the rustling of dresses, and the incessant talking of belles and beaux. He had spoken but a few moments before every whisper was hushed; every ear was still; there was a silence that might be felt, and all eyes were riveted upon the stripling poet, who held them spell-bound by the beauty of imagery and the flow of his periods.

A mere boy in size, he seemed to enlarge with his subject, and before he was half through he appeared like a youthful giant,—and when he closed, the house rang with applause, and the stage was literally covered with bouquets thrown from ladies in the galleries. A gentleman of literary taste and culture was at my side, who had attended forty Commencements at Harvard College, and he remarked to me, that "he had never heard a Commencement part that surpassed that either in manner or matter;" said he, "if this is one of your Bowdoin boys, I should like to see the men."

We have many pleasing reminiscences of young POINDEXTER. He had many of the traits and peculiarities of OLIVER GOLDSMITH, and always brought to mind the author of the Deserted Village. His talents, his genial good humor, his sparkling wit, his irresistible drollery, will keep him ever fresh in memory. Every one of his classmates will hear of his untimely death with a feeling of sorrow and bereavement, for he was in the class a petted favorite; and those of our community who happened to form his acquaintance when in College, will say—alas! poor fellow, he deserved a better fate than to be shot down in the streets like a brute."—Brunswick Intelligencer.

VISITS TO THE PRESIDENT.—Chief Justice TANEY and the Associate Justices who had arrived in season for the opening of the Court, viz.: Judges NELSON, GRIER, CLIFFORD and CAMPBELL—paid their respects yesterday to President BUCHANAN, and the interview was a most agreeable one, indeed, sufficiently indicating the hearty mutual respect and good feeling existing between the Executive and the Judiciary of the nation. Vice-President BRECKINRIDGE and many other persons of note, took occasion yesterday to call upon the President, and were received with the heartiest welcome by Mr. BUCHANAN, who despite the laborious care he bestows upon every detail of his official duty, yet finds time to receive his visitors with the ease and cordiality of the thorough man of leisure.—Washington Star, Dec. 6.

OBITUARY.

Death of Hon. Theodore Sedgwick.

ACTION OF THE COURTS—EULOGIES BY MESSRS. CHARLES O'CONNOR, WILLIAM CURTIS NOYES, DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, AND OTHERS — ADJOURNMENTS.

On Thursday night, Hon. THEODORE SEDGWICK, United States District-Attorney for the Southern District of this State, died, after a somewhat protracted illness, at the residence of his mother, and his native place, Stockbridge, Mass. He was a member of the SEDGWICK family of that State, of whom Miss SEDGWICK, the author of Home, Three Ways of Living, &c., &c., is, perhaps, most popularly known. His father, ROBERT SEDGWICK, practiced law in this City, gaining considerable eminence and deserved respect. THEODORE graduated at Columbia College, where his literary abilities commanded the admiration of his classmates and the approbation of his tutors. During the administration of JACKSON, and when he was only twenty-five years old, he was sent to Paris as an attaché of the Livingston Legation, and when that Ambassador died he wrote his biography. This, we believe, was his first work. On returning from Paris, he settled in this City, and devoted himself mainly to the duties of the legal profession, occasionally seeking a respite in the amenities of literature, of which he was an enthusiastic lover. Most of his published works, it is true, are strictly of a legal nature, and bear, among lawyers, a high reputation. Of these, may be specially noticed his treatises on Constitutional Laws, and on Damages. A collection of the writings of WM. LEGGETT was also edited by him. Politics attracted much of his attention and enlisted his efforts, although he was never a very active participant in the party contests of the day. He was a Democrat, and a warm supporter of Gen. JACKSON and Mr. VAN BUREN. In 1844, when the Annexation of Texas was made the leading topic of political controversy, Mr. SEDGWICK took an active and influential part in arousing public sentiment against that measure. He wrote a series of letters for the Evening Post, which were published under the signature "Veto," and attracted general attention. The leading ground of his opposition to this measure was the extension of Slavery, and the increase of the slave influence in the affairs of the general Government which it would involve. The Essays were afterwards published in pamphlet form, and will be found, even now, to embody most of the arguments which have since been adduced by the Republican Party in support of their cardinal principles. He acted with the Free Soil Party in 1848, supporting Mr. VAN BUREN instead of Gen. CASS, the regular Democratic nominee,—but returned to the regular ranks at the next election, and continued afterwards to maintain his position as a National Democrat. He never held office until January, 1858, when Mr. JOHN MCKEON was removed by President BUCHANAN, for his course in opposing the reëlection of FERNANDO WOOD to the Mayoralty. Mr SEDGWICK was then nominated as his successor to the office of District Attorney of the Southern District of New-York. For some time there was much doubt whether the Federal Legislature would confirm his nomination, but when this was done, there were few, even among those who rebuked the President's course with respect to Mr. MCKEON, who regretted that Mr. SEDGWICK was to succeed him.

Mr. SEDGWICK was a frequent contributor, of late years, to magazine literature, especially to Harper's Monthly. He, also, at its outset, wrote the leading articles for Harper's Weekly Journal, until the original character of that periodical was changed, and it became merely an illustrated newspaper. If, hereafter, these lighter essays, the recreation of his leisure, shall be forgotten, the works on jurisprudence, which he contributed to the legal lore of his country are likely to have an enduring place on the shelves of every lawyer. Mr. CUTTING happily observed of him, yesterday, in the United States Court, while paying a public tribute to his memory, that "Nature had endowed him with her richest gifts, and these he had cultivated till he was one of the most accomplished scholars that our community could boast of;" and Mr. O'CONOR said of him, that "Far more frequently than among ourselves, is he referred to by Judges in England as an approved legal authority."

The pursuits and advancement of science had great attractions for Mr. SEDGWICK, and, in its gratification, among other projects by which he is advantageously known, is that of the New-York Crystal Palace, which, following too soon on the great success of the "World's Fair," at London, may perhaps have been comparatively a failure, but which does not the less indicate his national and enterprising spirit. He was not only the President of the Association, but the prime mover in its organization, and director of its whole proceedings. At this time, moreover, his health was so much impaired that he was compelled to relinquish his professional duties, so that the labor which he gave to the Crystal Palace scheme was mostly a labor of love, as he never predicted anything in its favor as a pecuniary speculation.

We do not know Mr. SEDGWICK'S exact age, but he was not much past the prime of life—forty-one or two. A meeting of the bar, as a general tribute of respect to his memory, it is understood, will be held at an early day.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT IN THE COURTS.

U. S. DISTRICT AND CIRCUIT COURTS.

Both the United States District and Circuit Courts adjourned yesterday in consequence of the intelligence of the death of the United States District Attorney for this District, Mr. THEODORE SEDGWICK. Judge BETTS, who was trying an Admiralty cause in the District Court, suspended proceedings and took his seat upon the bench of the Circuit Court with Judge INGERSOLL, who was trying the case of the Adams Express Company against MARONEY. The counsel from both Courts collected and that trial was suspended likewise. Judge BETTS then said that the Courts had been apprised of very painful intelligence in respect to a high officer of the Court, and were now ready to have the matter brought officially before them.

Mr. HUNT, the Assistant District Attorney, then rose and said: May it please the Court, I arise to announce that I have received a telegraphic dispatch announcing that Mr. SEDGWICK is no more. He died at Stockbridge, Mass., at 12 o'clock last night. Perceiving that there are gentlemen present who were more his equals in age and who knew him more intimately than I did, I will do no more than make the announcement of the fact, that such notice of it may be taken by them and by the Court as shall be appropriate.

Mr. O'CONOR rose and addressed the Court as follows: This melancholy intelligence, though not entirely unexpected, has just reached the members of the profession here and taken them entirely unprepared to make such remarks as the serious loss which the profession has sustained in Mr. SEDGWICK'S death should call for. Little more can now be done than to adopt the usual motion, that out of respect to the memory of the deceased this Court do now adjourn.

If the closing of a well-spent life can have any circumstance connected with it, which more than any other serves, at the moment, to soften the effect of the blow on those who loved the deceased; if any circumstance more than any other can palliate the gush of feeling, the access of affliction, which at the moment is produced by information of this kind, however long may have been the warning that its occurrence was to be feared, it is finding that information accompanied by the statement which we find in this telegraphic dispatch: "Mr. SEDGWICK died last evening at 12 o'clock. His death was calm and peaceful.'

A life of active industry, in the course of which he acquired for himself the esteem of all who knew him, and secured to himself the warm attachment of his fellow-members of the bar—a life of great activity, rather than of entire calm, is terminated as such a life may best be terminated. When the fever and struggle of life was over, it was terminated with that calmness of peace and mind, which is the proper attendant of that state when, mortal life accomplished, the just man leaves this frail world to put on immortality.

Mr. SEDGWICK not only attained all that I have stated; attained all that a successful and meritorious and virtuous career at the Bar could secure to him; but more than perhaps any other gentleman, he devoted himself to the legal literature of his country. He wrote one work, among the several which he wrote, of great merit and usefulness, supplying a deficiency which was greatly felt, and which had received no systematic study and arrangement of authorities previous to his undertaking it. He undertook it at an early period of his career; he did not consume a great length of time in its production, but so much clearness of intellect and depth of research were evinced that it placed the work at once where it now stands among the familiar authorities of the law. Far more frequently than among ourselves, thus realizing the proverb that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country, is he referred to by Judges in England as an approved authority upon this difficult branch of jurisprudence. That fact alone has secured to him an earthly immortality, while his virtuous life, we may be sure, insured him a happy spiritual immortality.

The motion to adjourn was seconded by Mr. CUTTING, who said that the intelligence had occasioned to all sensations of profound regret. He did not rise to make a eulogy upon the departed; he had known him many years and been intimately associated with him in matters of the highest importance, and during all these years he had had ample opportunity of witnessing his learning, his industry, his accomplishments, and his varied acquirements, and also those qualities of his heart which endeared him to others in the highest degree. Nature had endowed him with her richest gifts, and these he had cultivated till he was one of the most accomplished scholars that our community could boast. By his death a great loss had been sustained by the Government in being deprived of a valuable public officer in this most important District of its business; by the Bar in having the ties which had bound him to them rent asunder, and by the community in losing a member so distinguished, not only for public excellence, but for private virtue. Mr. CUTTING went on to speak of Mr. SEDGWICK'S use of his pen for the good of the community, and that in times when party spirit raged high, he had been always ready to come forward and stand by the Union and the country, and the principles which would sustain them, and then saying that he had been carried into a train of remarks not entirely appropriate to the occasion, he closed by saying that when anything like a full review of his course and character were attempted, it should only be done upon full preparation.

Judge BETTS said that the Court fully appreciated the remarks which had been made, and united with the bar in their estimation of him. The Court, he said, would refrain from any extended remarks and accept the motion, and order both the Circuit and District Courts to be adjourned, and the entry of the proceedings to be made upon the minutes.

NEW-YORK SUPREME COURT—BEFORE JUSTICE CLERKE.

Mr. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, at the conclusion of the argument of a motion then before the Supreme Court, at Special Term, rose and announced the decease of Mr. SEDGWICK. Mr. FIELD said that the loss of Mr. SEDGWICK would be deeply felt, not only by his personal friends, but by the Bench and the Bar at large throughout the State. Mr. SEDGWICK'S abilities as a jurist and as a writer had placed him deservedly in the highest rank of the profession, and he concluded with a motion that the Court direct a suitable entry to be made on its minutes commemorative of the event, and that it now stand adjourned as a mark of respect for the memory of the deceased.

Mr. WM. CURTIS NOYES seconded the motion. Mr. SEDGWICK had long been renowned for profound legal learning, for much general scholarship, for great ability in the pursuit of his profession, and for an ardent zeal in the prosecution of his studies. His contributions to legal literature were well known and widely read, and he felt sure that his loss would be a subject of deep regret to all, for all knew and esteemed him.

Judge CLERKE said he fully concurred in the views expressed by the learned gentlemen, and directed the Clerk to make a fitting entry in the records of the Court, as suggested by Mr. FIELD.

The Court then adjourned sine die.

THE SUPERIOR COURT.

The death was announced on Friday, about 2 o'clock P. M., in the Superior Court by A. OAKEY HALL, Esq., who made the following remarks as a preface to the usual motion in such cases for an adjournment:

Since the opening of the Court business I have learned of the death of a valued friend—the honored friend of the entire Bar—the recognized friend to polite letters, as well as of written jurisprudence—a ripe scholar—an ever-affable associate or adversary—the pride of his family and of society—who has a patriotic and historic name—who has been proved a faithful public servant, and who leaves to this world's chronicles an unspotted private and public reputation—I speak of Mr. THEODORE SEDGWICK, the United States District Attorney.

Undoubtedly other, and more matured, and more appropriate voices than mine will elsewhere, at a general meeting of the New-York Bar, speak fully his eulogy and our sorrow.

I now move that when this Court rises, it adjourn out of respect to the memory of the honored legal associate to whom I have alluded, and that it so evidence by its minutes.

This motion was seconded by JOHN D. SHERWOOD, Esq., after which the Court adjourned until Monday.

THE MARINE COURT.

The Marine Court was the first in which the melancholy news was announced. The following proceedings took place:

Mr. L. L. CONDEIT rose to perform, he said, a sad very sad duty. He who was until yesterday an able efficient, and universally beloved District-Attorney o the Southern District of New-York, had ceased to be THEODORE SEDGWICK was no more. He to whom the young members of his profession were taught to look up to as a bright example, for integrity and ability as an advocate, and amiability as a man, died last night, and out of respect to his memory, he moved that the Court do adjourn.

Mr. C. T. BULKLEY said that the melancholy intelligence just communicated to His Honor, illustrates the truth of the old adage, that "death loves a shining mark." Sprung from good New-England stock, the deceased had proved himself no unworthy representative. At an age when most men were commencing their career, he was employed in the active service of his country as Secretary of Legation in France. Returning from thence, he passed the prime of his life in our midst, well known to all as an active, zealous and skillful practitioner at our Bar. In the retirement of private life, he bestowed the fruits of his good experience in the preparation of treatises which had already acquired a world-wide reputation.

Judge MCCARTHY said that he indorsed the remarks of the speakers, and would grant the motion.

The Court was then adjourned to Monday next.

Funeral of Another United States District-Attorney.

TOLEDO, Friday, Dec. 9.

The funeral of Hon. DANIEL O. MORTON, late United States District-Attorney for Ohio, was largely attended to-day by members of the profession as a body, and the citizens generally. Judges PORTER, MASON, MYERS, FITCH, DUNLAP and Gen. HILL officiated as pall-bearers. The Courts here and in Cleveland passed resolutions expressive of the general grief, and adjourned.

DEATH OF MRS. FERNANDO WOOD.

Action of the City Authorities—Resolutions and Adjournment of the Boards of Canvassers and Councilmen.

We regret to have to record the sudden death of MRS. ANN D. WOOD, the wife of Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, the Mayor elect of New-York. The sad event occurred early yesterday morning. Mrs. WOOD had given birth to an infant on Saturday evening last; but the illness of the lady had not assumed any serious indications until Thursday. On the night of election there were many noisy demonstrations around the house, and it is presumed that the excitement of that occasion, and the interest she naturally felt in the result of the contest, gave her symptoms an unfavorable turn, and brought about the unhappy event. For the last four years the health of the deceased had been extremely delicate. Mr. WOOD, who was absent at Washington, was at once apprised of the distressing fact by telegraph. He was expected in the City last evening.

MRS. WOOD, whose kindly benevolence and sweetness of temper had won many friends in the community, was the daughter of Judge RICHARDSON, of Auburn, in this State, and was married to Mr. WOOD eighteen years since. Eight children, of whom seven survive, were the fruit of this union. She had attained the age of 37. The funeral is announced to take place from the residence of Mayor WOOD, Bloomingdale Road, on Monday, at 11 A. M.

ACTION OF THE BOARD OF CANVASSERS.

The Board of City Canvassers met at 10½ o'clock yesterday morning, and proceeded with its labors. The Canvass of the returns from the Sixteenth Ward was commenced. When all but the last District of the Ward had been gone through with,

Alderman BOOLE, the Chairman, announced the reception of the following message from the Mayor:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, New-York, Dec. 9th, 1859.

To the Hon. the Board of City Canvassers:

GENTLEMEN—I have received the melancholy intelligence of the death of Mrs. FERNANDO WOOD, the wife of the Mayor elect, who died at the residence of her husband, at Bloomingdale, in this city, at 6 o'clock this morning. This painful bereavement, following so closely upon the elevation of her husband to his distinguished position, while it teaches most impressively the lesson of human weakness, should also awaken our sympathy for him who has sustained so great a blow, in the loss of the partner of his joys and griefs. The deceased lady was known for her

PARISIAN TOPICS.

A Russian Grand Duchess—One of the Heroes of Solferino—A Political Humanitarian—Story of the Chereau Abduction—A Specific for Asthma—Medical Memoranda—Anecdote of Alexander Dumas.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Tuesday, Nov. 22, 1859.

The Grand Duchess MARIA, of Russia, is just now the astonishment of the Parisians. The Princess' reputation for beauty and practical good sense had preceded her to Paris, and although this is the first time she has ever visited the French capital, she was hardly a stranger to its best society. The Princess OLGA, more beautiful still than her sister MARIA, is of a diplomatic turn of mind, and often aided her father, the Czar NICHOLAS, in his secret negotiations with foreign courts, as she does now her brother ALEXANDER; but MARIA turns her attention to the encouragement of art and of charitable institutions. Every morning, at 10 o'clock, the Princess leaves her hotel to visit the town. She appears desirous to see Paris from top to bottom, and from end to end. When she returns in the afternoon her saloons are full of statesmen, artists, men of letters, and her antechamber and stairway are encumbered with works of art, either bought with her own money or sent as presents. It is observed as something remarkable, that among her visitors and the boxes that encumber her lodgings, milliners and their goods occupy no place. She appears to inherit that desire for the useful and the practical which characterizes so largely the entire Romanoff family. But the event which most astonished the fair Parisians was the Princess' visit to an establishment over whose threshold no princely feet had ever before crossed, and whose existence even was perhaps almost entirely unknown to them. This was the visit to the Hospital La Riboisiére. She was accompanied in this visit by the Prefect of the Seine, by one of the Surgeons of the establishment, M. CHAISSAGNAC, by the director, and by her Highness' suite. This hospital has only been finished four years, and is considered the model hospital of Europe. It is particularly remarkable for its improved system of heating and ventilation, (not superior to that, however, in use in the United States,) and the careful isolation of its wards, so as to interrupt the spread of contagion. The Princess MARIA is directress of a Foundling Hospital at St. Petersburg, and occupies herself, in person, with the direction of the establishment. She is also a patroness of other charitable institutions, and on her return to St. Petersburg, intends to build a hospital of 150 beds for invalid women. The Princess' visit to La Riboisiére, in which she went through the establishment in all its details, approaching the beds of the sufferers with words of consolation, inspecting the dressings, visiting the dormitories even of the nurses, must have left an agreeable impression upon the other visitors as well as upon the inmates of the hospital. And with what astonishment, perhaps confusion, must the Parisian lady friends of the Princess have listened to her description of an establishment at their own doors, and which they had never visited nor perhaps even heard of. The Princess has also visited the Convent of the Carmelites, into which only Princesses of royal blood are admitted. She was obliged, therefore, to leave all her attendants at the door, and to enter alone. She goes, also, very often to the theatre incognito.

While the Princess MARIA was visiting La Riboisiére, her two sons were at the Polygone of Vincennes, at the invitation of the Minister of War, witnessing the exercises with the new fire-arms. The eldest, the Prince NICHOLAS, Duke of Leuchtenberg, although but fifteen years of age, exhibited remarkable dexterity in the use of the long-range musket. At the same time the artillery-men of Vincennes were experimenting with an enormous cannon, constructed at the Museum of Artillery of Paris, on the American breach-loading model. The Emperor is deeply interested in the gun, and is anxious to apply this system to his rifle-cannon. The two brothers, NICHOLAS and EUGENE, (they are grand-sons of the Emperor NICHOLAS and of EUGENE BEAUHARNAIS, Viceroy of Italy,) went also to the Invalides to visit the remains of the glorious army of the first Empire, yet on their feet, or rather on their pins. It is needless to say that the grand children of EUGENE BEAUHARNAIS, so popular among the soldiers of the Grand Army, were received with immense demonstrations of pleasure and respect by the old soldiers. It is said that when the young Prince NICHOLAS was first presented to the Emperor NAPOLEON III., on their arrival here a fortnight ago, his Majesty embraced him and held him a long time on his breast. The young Prince's father, the Duke of LEUCHTENBERG, now dead, and LOUIS NAPOLEON, were intimate friends.

One of the most seriously wounded officers at Solferino, Gen. DIEU, has just arrived at Paris for the first time since the war. It will be recollected that during the early part of the Crimean war, General (then Colonel) DIEU was gravely wounded, and for a time was reported dead at Paris. The some thing occurred to this officer during the late Italian campaign. Several times he was reported at Paris as dead. Notwithstanding the gravity of his wounds he was carried the day after the battle of Solferino as far as Brescia, where he remained two months. He was then conveyed, still suffering, into France, and was received into the house of a friend at Brunoy, not far from Paris, where he has ever since been confined under surgical treatment. At this place he has received frequent visits from his brothers in arms, and among the rest that of Marshal D'HILLIERS. Certain posts, it is seen, are attended with a sort of fatality. The General of Brigade who preceded Gen. DIEU in this command, was Gen. BROUAT, killed at Montebello a month previously. Gen. ANGE was struck at Solferino at nearly the same moment as Gen. DIEU. The former died of his wound; the latter, after months of suffering, is now on his feet again. It may be in place to mention here that the health of Marshal BOSQUET grows no better; he is partially paralyzed, and there are no immediate hopes of his resuming the command to which he is assigned by the army regulations.

Germany has at last got over the Schiller crisis. It was high time, for the Germans in Paris began to grow corpulent on Schiller dinners. This national effervescence collapsed, the fatherland will settle down to its pipe and bier till the necessity is again felt for one of those intermittent outbursts of patriotism which is growing chronic and traditional with the Teutonics, and which does not seem at all particular as to the nature of the pretext. To-day it is SCHILLER—to-morrow it will be something else. Once a year, more or less, the great German race thinks it necessary to shake its hoary locks, to let the world know that there is still a fatherland, that Germans are patriotic, and that the union—the long looked-for—is imminent.

Ever since the Republic of 1848, France has possessed one of the most indefatigable candidates for a legislator on record. This gentleman, a wealthy landholder and a resident of Paris, is named BERTRON. He calls himself the humanitary candidate, and claims the support of the "humans" as against the "inhumans." At every election at Paris, whether the regular election, or for a vacancy, Mr. BERTRON sacrifices his private comfort to the public good so far as to allow his name to be used as a candidate by his friends, the "humans," and accordingly covers the dead walls of the city with his appeals to the public. These appeals, by their piquant originality, have made M. BERTRON quite a famous individual, but not so famous as to carry him into the coveted office. The fact is, and it should be told to the everlasting shame of his friends, the "humans," he has never had more than eighty votes, and these, some individuals are cruel enough to say, were quizzing and vicarious ones, intended for that very ambiguous personage, Mr. Scattering. But M. BERTRON was not satisfied with the oft-repeated verdict of the people of the department of the Seine, and so he has been trying his luck with the "humans" of the rural districts. Thus far, however, he has succeeded no better than at Paris; but nothing discouraged, he has just announced his candidacy in two country districts in terms which ought to immortalize a less obstinate candidate. He thus commences the first of these appeals: "Electors of Angers: Conceived in one of the mercantile houses of my father in the city of Angers, the 9th of June, 1803, the day celebrated by Christians as the fête of God, and born at La Fleche, in the old chateau of that city, on the Loire, the 5th of March, 1804, my father, mother," &c. Propagated and born in the city of Angers is assuredly something; but as if convinced himself of the insufficiency of this claim upon the suffrages of the voters, the humanitary candidate hastens to add: "At the age of six years I fought a duel in order to save the reputation of the daughter of a brave officer killed in the service of his country, which an artillery student was about to compromise." He then goes on to say that he desires to become "the legislator of the human race, a function which no one has yet occupied;" and then declares that: "I avow to you that I do not know where anything exists with which I am not acquainted; I do not believe that anything which interests humanity is beyond my knowledge." After that il faut tirer l'échelle.

During the late trial of Mademoiselle LEONIE CHEREAU, for the abduction of a child, the audience was several times moved to tears by the touching letters of LEONIE, addressed to young PRIEUR, her hard-hearted lover. It has been discovered that these letters were copied entire from young DUMAS' celebrated play of the "Dame aux Camelias," and thus we see another proof of the universal popularity of this famous piece. It comes back to us daily under one form or another, it has been translated into a dozen languages, and is sung in poetry and recited in prose. In America it is called "Camille," in England and elsewhere the "Traviata," and it has still other names. No wonder that the audience at the Palace of Justice was moved to tears at the remarkable letters of LEONIE CHEREAU; Marguerite Gautier, or Camille, if you please, had already moved to tears thousands of audiences with the same letters. But under whatever form we see it, the "Dame aux Camelias" is always a success, and looking at the subject in a philosophical point of view, this universal popularity is very suggestive. The same author will bring out in a fortnight, at the Gymnase Theatre, a piece on which he has been engaged nearly two years, entitled "The Prodigal Father." Like the other successes of this author—the "Dame aux Camelias," the "Demi-Monde," the "Question d'Argent"—the new piece will be founded in the society and in the manners of the present epoch. M. DUMAS, Sr., it is said, is the model of the hero of the "Pére Prodigue." One of those immense successes to which the younger DUMAS has been accustomed the last few years is anticipated for this piece.

A cure for that very universal and often intractable disease, Asthma, has just been presented to the learned societies of Paris by M. VELPEAU, for the discoverer, Dr. COURTY, a Professor of the Medical School of Montpelier. The remedy seems so positive, and its necessity so palpable, that an early notice of it in this place will no doubt be acceptable to the many sufferers from this disease, as well as to the medical profession. The remedy is simple, and consists alone in the injection of the sulphate of atropine under the skin of the neck over the course of the pneumogastric nerve. That the general reader may understand something of this operation, I should state that the substance injected is an alkaloid made from the atropa belladonna, or deadly nightshade, a plant of widely extended growth in the United States. Its narcotic and poisonous qualities are well known. In medicinal doses, however, it acts powerfully in allaying pain and in controlling irritability of the nervous system. The difficulty was, in asthma, to bring this substance into contact with the great nerve, or pair of nerves, which supply the principal part of nervous filaments to the lungs. Dr. COURTY, it appears, the idea once conceived, did not hesitate to thrust a trocar and canula into the region of the nerve, and directly over it, and there to inject a few drops of the medicine and leave it. The incision was made inside the sterno-cleido-mastoid muscle on a level with the thyroid cartilage, and directly over the sheath of the great vessels of the neck. The trocar was pushed in at first a distance of 7 or 8 millimetres only, from fear of wounding the important organs of this region. The quantity of liquid injected was six drops, containing about two milligrammes of the sulphate of atropine. This first injection relieved the patient, but not entirely, and was attended with the usual symptoms of large doses of belladonna. A second injection was made four days afterwards on the other side of the neck, and this time the trocar was inserted as deep again as on the first occasion. The trocar was then withdrawn, and the point of the canula "promenaded" a little up and down in the cellular tissue, in order to diffuse the medicine over as large a surface of the covering of the great vessels as possible. The cure was rapid and permanent from that day.

The idea of Dr. COURTY originated in a treatment put in practice lately by Dr. BEAU, at the Charity Hospital of this city, for neuralgia, especially for the neuralgia of the thorax, which sometimes accompanies pneumonia. In these cases Dr. BEAU injected sulphate of atropine under the skin in the intervals between the ribs, and obtained immediate relief from the practice. I should add, that in the experiment of Dr. COURTY he administered opium to counteract the specific effects of the atropine on the general system with entire success. This antagonistical effect of opium on atropine had been already remarked by physicians, and they will thus be enabled to push the belladonna to any desired extent, without fearing too much its toxical influence.

Dr. TROUSSEAU, the distinguished physician of the Hotel Dieu Hospital of this city, and Clinical Professor to the Faculty of Medicine, has just described to his immense audience, at the Hotel Dieu, a disease which may be called new, and which I mention here solely on this account. It is the paralysis which not unfrequently, of late years, is observed to follow the diptheritic affections of the throat—most frequently the diptherite couenneuse, or croup. This affection is only a sequel of the throat disease, and is intermittent in its attacks on the various members of the body. The paralysis is most marked in the eyes, the legs and the arms, and alternates between these without any symmetry of movement. The disease is often so mild as to disappear without any interference on the part of the physician; at other times, but more rarely, it terminates the life of the patient in spite of the most energetic treatment.

M. BABINET, of the Paris Observatory, has advanced before the Academy of Sciences the singular proposition, that in all rivers left to themselves, it is invariably the right bank that is washed by floods—that is to say, it is the right bank which suffers the most friction and the most destruction. He explains this by the direction and force of the earth's rotation. His contradictors at the Academy admit that this may be true of rivers running north and south, but they deny the principle for those which run east and west, in the direction of the earth's rotation. M. BABINET contends that even here the friction of the right bank is slightly greater than that of the left. Will some American professor take the trouble to reply to the French astronomer's proposition? For it is especially in America that it can be proved or disproved by actual observation.

An author by the name of BOREL lately died in France, who once sent to the Chamber of Deputies, under LOUIS PHILIPPE, in the form of a petition, the most lugubrious drollery ever conceived by a diseased brain. In view of the fact that a great number of people, to the scandal and shame of the public, persisted in killing themselves awkwardly in public places, or in hiding their mutilated bodies in the seclusion of forests or rivers, or, in fine, in carrying the ineffaceable traces on their persons of abortive and awkward attempts at self-destruction, he, the said PETRUS BOREL, demanded that the Place de la Concorde should be arranged every Sunday as a sort of circus, with a scaffold in the centre, where ... life should have the privilege ... self properly and decently, in presence of the public, who should pay for admission, and at a rate according to the wants of the candidate for suicide.

Let us finish with an anecdote of ALEXANDRE DUMAS, senior of the name, told this week by Figaro. DUMAS, it is well known, has as many decorations on his breast, if he would wear them, as there are planets in the heavens. A few years ago, when at Leghorn, he made a visit to the reigning Prince CHARLES LOUIS, who received him with great distinction. The Prince had for some time been desirous of having his arms lithographed, and failing in finding an artistin his dominions capable of executing the work, he desired Dumas to obtain it done at Paris. DUMAS kept his word, and immediately on his return to Paris had the precious coat of arms engraved and sent to the Prince, with the accompanying bill of 200 francs. The bill was never paid and DUMAS had forgotten the circumstance, when, one morning he received the visit of his Excellency, the Marquis of BRIGNOLE SALE, Ambassador of the King of Sardinia, and also Chargé d'Affaires of the Grand Duke of Leghorn. It was, however, in the latter capacity that the Marquis had busines with DUMAS.

"Sir," said the Marquis, "I am charged by the Duke of LEGHORN to remit to you the Grand Cordon of his Orders, and I am happy in being the agent of transmitting to you this good news."

"I am deeply obliged to his Highness," replied DUMAS, "but will it cost me much—this honor?"

"Almost nothing; you will have a remittance of the largest taxes connected with it."

"I accept," replied DUMAS, "on condition that it does not go beyond two hundred francs. His Highness has the goodness to owe me that sum, and I will consider the debt paid, in exchange for his Grand Cordon!" MALAKOFF.

SCHILLER FEST AT MUNICH.

Royal Countenance—The Preparations—Torchlight Demonstrations—Scenes in the Lager Shops—Ceremonies at the Odeon.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

MUNICH, Saturday, Nov. 12, 1859.

To-day is the last day of the Schiller Fest in Munich. It has been celebrated here under the most favorable circumstances, the Government granting all the requests of the Committee, and the people taking a lively interest and an active part in the proceedings. Old King LUDWIG sent the Committee a thousand florins, with an autograph letter, expressing in glowing terms (for the old gentleman is himself a poet) his sympathy with this remembrance of a National German poet, who ever "pressed upward to the Ideal." The Queen graciously promised to attend the entertainment in the Odeon and bring the King along. And finally, that nothing might be wanting to the completeness of the festivities, your correspondent kindly lent them his presence throughout.

At 6 o'clock on the evening of the 9th began the first grand performance in the Royal "Hoftheater," (the largest theatre in Germany.) The programme consisted of a prologue written for the occasion by some machine poet, (a class as numerous here as they are with us;) after which, a recitation by an actress of the "Song of the Bell;" and, lastly, the performance of "Wallensteiu's Lager," which was splendidly given.

The theatre closed at 8½ o'clock, and the people poured in masses to the Feldherrnhalle, (Hall of the Marshals,) to await the coming of the torch-light procession of the students.

The Hall of the Marshals stands at one end of the Ludwigstrasse, which is a hundred and eighty feet wide and about a mile long. At the other end is the famous triumphal arch, (in the style of CONSTANTINE'S at Rome,) and, the street being straight, the vista from the Hall is magnificent. The Feldherrnhalle itself is a copy of the Loggia dei Lanzi, in Florence, and consists of a high open portico, which takes up a hundred and twenty feet of the width of the Ludwigstrasse, leaving only a narrow lane on each side. It derives its name from the statues of the Marshals, TILLY and WREDE, which stand under the two arches on either side the steps which lead up into the portico.

On this occasion the Hall was brilliantly illuminated, and under the middle arch, looking very puny in contrast with the colossal bronzes beside it, was a white bust of SCHILLER. The choir, with their singing books all ready, stood waiting around the bust; and below, in the cold and mud, about twenty thousand men, women and children stood waiting too.

The "Tackelzug" was to start at half-past eight from the "Gate of Victory" already mentioned, which is hard by the University; and a little after that hour the lurid glare upon the sky, and the palaces that line the street, announced that they were coming. There were from six to eight hundred torches which sent forth a cloud of bituminous smoke that hung many hours over the city. The procession, making way for itself through the crowd by carrying the torches flame outwards, reached at last the foot of the steps, and halted. The eager choir then had its opportunity. A black profile of a man then appeared in the blaze of light, and began furiously to beat time, so near poor SCHILLER'S head that one feared every instant to see its emptiness exposed. The ode which followed was grandly sung, by several hundred male voices; and its effect was heightened by the acoustic aid of the arched Hall. After the ode, a head was seen near SCHILLER'S head, and a shrill voice made a short speech, to inform us that we were met to celebrate the birthday "of a man who" &c., &c., (quite inaudible for some time, and at last) THREE CHEERS FOR SCHILLER! Then there was a great flourish of trumpets and drums, and everybody said Hoch! quite distinctly, three times. That's the way the Germans cheer. When we were done, there were three more hochs from the people on the outskirts of the crowd, who had just got it into their heads what it was all about.

The torches now began to stream down through the street at the left of the Hall, past the Palace, the Theatre, the Post-office, &c., through the principal business street, and out to the great Carlsplatz, just outside the gates of the same name, and near the railway dépôt. Here they gathered in a circle, sung together to good old "Gandeamus," and threw their torches blazing through the air into a great pile in the midst of the circle. By this time the students were as grimy and black as chimney-sweeps, from the smoke of the tar, and as they stood solemnly around the blazing fire, and under a canopy of thick black smoke, one might imagine them a thousand fiends—only that would be hardly appropriate for a Schiller celebration!

A scientific friend, who stood by me to witness the scene, calculated that there was enough gas wasted (from the torches) to light up all the streets of Munich for the evening, and soot enough to black all its boots for the next morning. On such a magnificent scale do the Germans get up celebrations!

We went round to several beer-houses after this to see the really popular part of the day's festivities. For the theatre only holds two to three thousand—and there are still 130,000 who must have a celebration too. Your true German, if he wishes to commemorate a great event, takes his sweetheart or his wife and goes to the Bierlocal. On this occasion all the great bier-houses were crowded to suffocation. Through the atmosphere, which was mostly carbonic acid and tobacco smoke, one could distinguish the very respectable citizens and their wives, who sipped, or swallowed, or gulped, or poured down their beer, enjoying meanwhile music of no mean order, and the most good-natured social conversation. All the next day I was a martyr, carrying about, in the shape of "Katzenjammer," the consequences of an hour spent in that dreadful atmosphere. At 12 o'clock I gained my lodgings (with the aid of the usual three ponderous house-keys, which belong to every respectable dwelling,) and thus ended the first day of the Schillerfest.

The morning of the 10th opened with a snow-storm, which melted as it fell, preparing the way for the rain which followed. In the afternoon, it cleared up (out of consideration for SCHILLER) and the most beautiful of evenings was illuminated by a full moon. The grand doings in the Odeon were the centre of attraction; and before 6 o'clock the audience were filling the hall,—those below, as the programme stipulated, in ball costume; but those in the galleries, more plainly, and for the season more sensibly clothed. All that artificial flowers, pretty dresses and bright looks (without the aid of any remarkable beauty) could do to render the scene brilliant and gay was certainly done. The men, in black and white, stood about like so many ravens in a flower-garden. The hall was decorated for the occasion with wreaths and bouquets of artificial flowers; the spaces between the pillars that support the galleries being hung with twenty-five pictures, in chiaroscuro, representing scenes from as many different poems by SCHILLER. At the end of the hall hung a curtain, which concealed for the time the further decorations, and over this another screen hid the colossal statue of SCHILLER (plaster) cast for the occasion, and to be unveiled in the course of the evening.

Half-past six was the appointed hour for commencing the exercises; but their Majesties having promised to come, it was impossible to go on without them: consequently, we were obliged to sit and stand patiently till half-past seven. At last they appeared, and were welcomed with three Hochs, for the people were really glad they had come. As soon as they and everybody else who had a seat were comfortably settled, the orchestra played, with great expression, under the leadership of LACHNER, an overture of MOZART; after which a prologue by Herr BODENSTEDT, who did all the verses for the occasion, was delivered by Herr DAHN, who did all the oratory, and deserves great praise for the distinctness with which he began each line, and the guttural faintness with which he ended it; thereby inducing many to buy the Committee's text-books after the performances, in order to know what he had been saying.

The entertainment which followed consisted of eight tableaux, from the dramas of SCHILLER—the "Robbers," "Fiesco," "Intrigue and Love," "Don Carlos," "Wallenstein," "Marie Stuart," "Maid of Orleans," and "William Tell." Before each tableau Herr DAHN favored the audience with a poetic introduction by Herr BODENSTEDT, delivered in his own peculiar tantalizing style, and after each, an appropriate selection of music was given by the orchestra, or the immense chorus, which was made up of several associations. The musical part of the entertainment consisted of the following pieces, in their order. The overture, song from "The Robbers," and chorus, by BEETHOVEN; overture by WEBER, chorus by MENDELLSOHN; ode "To Artists;" poetry by SCHILLER, music (for male voices) by BEETHOVEN; soldier's song from "Wallenstein" by STUNTZ; andante by BEETHOVEN; march by MENDELSSOHN; overture to "William Tell," by ROSSINI.

The tableaux were arranged by different artists and amateurs, and called forth the most enthusiastic applause. Each was greeted with a double encore. They were capitally managed, being framed by a kind of Grecian porch, (the curtain which concealed it fell away with a crash at a certain point in the prologue, when Herr DAHN told it to!) and so high up that the orchestra and singers did not interfere with the view of the "pictures." It is impossible to go through with a minute description of them all; they were undoubted chefs d'œuvres; but the gem of the evening was the scene from "Marie Stuart." The moment chosen was the last before her going to the scaffold, when her attendants, wringing their hands, or pressing forward to kiss hers, bade her a last farewell. The lady who personated the unfortunate Queen was beautiful enough to rival her, and, standing in the centre of the scene, calm in the midst of such emotion as was depicted in the countenances and attitudes of the rest, she equaled one's imaginations of that moment, as it is described in history and poetry—the highest praise that can be given to such a representation. This tableau was four times shown. It seemed as though people never could look at it enough. "The Death of Geisler," from "William Tell," was also much applauded.

The last tableau was called the "Apotheosis of Schiller." The green curtain which hid his statue was drawn aside amid enthusiastic acclamation. The likeness of the statue in dress and countenance was striking, and the conception very effective. The great poet was represented as rising before us as if from the grave. His right hand was uplifted in warning, and over his head were emblazoned the words "Sei einig, einig, einig!" (Be united, united, united.)

This allusion to the political significance of the Schillerfest, although remote, was sufficient to bring down the house. At the foot of the statue stood four allegorical figures, representing the nations of Bavaria, Franconia, Swabia and Saxony, who, led by the fifth, "Munichia," hung gilded wreaths upon the pedestal, while a grand festival chorus of BEETHOVEN was sung by the choir.

After this the seats were removed from the body of the hall, and for two hours, until midnight, the dance was in order. At twelve (the church authorities having forbidden any dancing on Friday) the assembly separated, with the pleasantest recollections to take with them, and the liveliest regret that centennials only come once in a hundred years. It is designed to photograph the tableaux, and form an album of them, which shall serve as souvenirs of the evening's festivities.

The next evening, "Wallenstein's Lod" was given in the Theatre. The house was full, and the performance unusually good. To-day, the 12th, the dinner comes off. And thus will end the Schillerfest, which cannot well have been more successful in any German city than here.

When the Committee went to invite him to the entertainment, old King LUDWIG is said to have told them, among other things, that he had always reverenced SCHILLER, and it had been a bitter regret to him all his life that he had been able to do nothing for him. When he was but eighteen, and traveling for the first time in Italy, he formed the plan of inviting SCHILLER and his family to join him in that southern clime, where, perhaps, the poet's health might have been restored, and his life spared for still greater works; when, alas! the painter, MULLER brought LUDWIG the news that SCHILLER was dead! "I assure you, gentlemen," said the old king, "it was like a stroke of lightning! I let the paper fall from my hands," Enough for the present. R. W. R.

The Newsboys' Lodging-House.

LETTER FROM A NEWSBOY TO THE SUPERINTENDENT OF THE LODGING-HOUSE.

M——, Ind., Thursday, Nov. 24, 1859.

TO MY FRIEND AND BENEFACTOR: So I take my pen in my hand to let you know how I am, and how I am getting along. As far as I see I am well satisfied with my place, but I took a general look around, and as far as I see, all the boys left in M—— are doing well, especially myself, and I think there is as much fun as in New-York, for nuts and apples are all free. I am much obliged to you, Mr. O'CONNOR, for the paper you sent me. I received it last night; I read it last night—something about the Newsboys' Lodging-house.

All the newsboys of New-York have a bad name, but we should show ourselves, and show them that we are no fools; that we can become as respectable as any of their countrymen, for some of you, poor boys, can do something for your country; for FRANKLIN, WEBSTER, CLAY, were poor boys once, and even Commodore V. C. PERRY or MATH. C. PERRY; but even GEORGE LAW, and VANDERBILT, and ASTOR, some of the richest men of New-York, and MATH., and N. C. PERRY were nothing but printers, and in the Navy on Lake Erie; and look at WINFIELD SCOTT! So, now, boys, stand up, and let them see you have got the real stuff in you. Come out here, and make respectable and honorable men, so they can say, there, that boy was once a newsboy!

Now, boys, you all know I have tried everything. I have been a newsboy, and when that got slack, you know I have smashed baggage, I have sold mats, I have peddled, I have worked on the rolling billows up the canal. I was a boot-black, and you know when I sold papers I was at the top of our profession. I had a good stand of my own, but I found that all would not do. I could not get along, but I am now going ahead. I have a first-rate home, $10 a month and my board, and I tell you, fellows, that is a great deal more than I could scrape up my best times in New-York. We are all on an equality, my boys, out here, so long as we keep ourselves respectable.

Mr. O'CONNOR, tell Tracy, or Mr. JOHN PETERSON, to send me a Christmas number of Frank Leslie's and Harpers' Weekly, a Weekly News, or some other pictorials to read, especially the Newsboys' Pictorial, if it comes out. No old papers, or else some. If they would get some other boys to get me some books, I want something to read.

I hope this letter will find you in good health as it leaves me. Mr. O'CONNOR, I expect an answer before two weeks,—a letter, and a paper.

Write to me about the Lodging-house; with this I close my letter, with much respect to all.

I remain your truly obedient friend. J. K.

FROM CANADA.

The Loss of the Indian—The Cunard vs. The Canadian Line of Atlantic Steamers—Dissatisfaction in the Provinces at the Discouragement of Colonial Enterprise.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

MONTREAL, Wednesday, Dec. 7, 1859.

The loss of the Indian, not fully covered by insurance, renews our fears as to the permanent success of the Canadian line, and at the same time fixes our resolve to protest loudly against the continued application, as regards us, of the process which tended so much to run Mr. COLLINS' line of steamers off the ocean, viz., the subsidizing, heavily and continuously, of a rival enterprise. A recapitulation of the position of the Canadian steam-line may here be not out of place.

It was the diversion of trade from the St. Lawrence to the Hudson which first made the Provincial Government deem it necessary to establish and subsidize a communication by steamer between Quebec and Montreal, on this side, and Liverpool on the other side of the Atlantic. And no sooner were the necessary arrangements made than the Governor-General of British North America, in a dispatch dated Sept. 2, 1856, urged the claims of the Canadian line to an Imperial subsidy as well. In that dispatch he used these words:

"A Canadian may ask, Why are we, in Canada, obliged to pay a subsidy at all to a line of steamers running from the St. Lawrence to a British port, by a route which we hold to be the most advantageous one? The merits of the route itself might make a subsidy unnecessary, were it not that Her Majesty's Government give a large bounty to a line running to foreign ports." He further wrote, "We cannot ask for any breach of faith towards the present contractors; we cannot ask for a sudden termination to an arrangement of which we have had the full benefit, but we may surely ask that no renewal of the arrangement may be made without hearing what Canada has to say, when the opportunity occurs." The then Colonial Secretary replied to this dispatch on Dec. 3, 1856, promising that, at the expiration of the Cunard contract, the Government of Great Britain "hoped that an arrangement more in conformity with what they would regard as an equitable consideration for the finances of Canada might be effected."

The state of matters when the Cunard contract was made was very different from what it is at the present time. Then—in 1839—we had no railroads, and if the steamers were to go to Boston and New-York, it was with the avowed purpose of facilitating communication between Britain and the North American dependencies of the Empire. There was also a provision that a branch-steamer should run to Quebec, but, after being kept up for some years, this part of the service was discontinued. Even in 1846, when the contract was renewed, and a weekly service commenced, we were not in a position to object. But since that time at least £10,000,000 of British capital have been invested in one of our railways alone, while we have built light-houses in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and established a tug service there, and made great advancement in many other points of view.

I may, perhaps, be allowed here to correct the Albany Journal, which attributes the loss of the Indian to the dangers of "the Northern route." The route the Indian and other Portland steamers take, is the Southern route, pursued by the Cunarders, and all other lines running between Liverpool and American ports. The Northern route is that viâ the Straits of Belle Isle, and when the Journal uses these words: "Travel in or near the St. Lawrence Gulf is a succession of perils. Shoals line it. Fogs overhang it. Reefs lurk underneath it," it refers to a state of things which is almost mythical. The St. Lawrence route used to be dangerous until recently, but the system of lighting it is now so perfect that there has been but one ship wrecked on it this year, viz.: the John Bull, and that was within the last three weeks, after Winter had set in.

Now the Cunard contract was to have expired on the 1st of January, 1862, but previously, that is to say, in 1858, it was renewed at an increased figure, namely, £176,340, besides extras, which were not to exceed £40,000. And although the Canada authorities were to have been afforded an opportunity of urging their views, as was promised by the Colonial Secretary in 1856, the first they learned of this renewal was through some members of the Colonial Government, who happened to be in England in November, 1858! Shortly afterwards, too, the Lever contract was made, at which we were still more indignant, perhaps because in this instance we had not only been aggrieved, but also befooled into giving glorious dinners to Lord BURY, the agent of the Galway line in America.

We, however, plucked up our spirits, and determined to increase our subsidy, and to make our service a weekly one, at least during the Summer months. The amount we agreed to pay per annum was £35,000 currency, or about £44,000 sterling. The Montreal Ocean Steamship Company, the owners of the Canadian Line, built bigger steamers, and did their share of duty nobly.

Meanwhile, the Galway contract had got into bad odor "at home," and a Committee was appointed by the Imperial Parliament to inquire into the question of subsidies generally. Our Ministers got wind of this very speedily, and no sooner was the session of the Colonial Parliament over, than one of them—Hon. JOHN ROSS, M. P. P. from Montreal—posted off to London, and was just in time to be examined as the last witness, before the Committee adjourned sine die. This was on the 11th of August. On the 16th he addressed the Colonial Secretary, the Duke of NEWCASTLE, on the same subject.

The Committee of Parliament did not report, owing to the termination of the session. Its proceedings, therefore, have not been officially published, but those interested have succeeded in obtaining the information they required. Mr. Ross's evidence is especially important to us. He is not given to mince matters, or to conceal his thoughts in obscure language, and, if he said "Colonial prosperity has been needlessly sacrificed to promote the interests of private companies," he only stated an opinion which is shared by a majority of our people, while, if he asserted that "an amount of irritation and dissatisfaction would arise in Canada which I do not pretend to predict the extent of, if the Canadian line is broken up," he was undoubtedly correct.

This question assumes a far broader significance when recent arrangements for the carriage of the European mails to and from the Western States are taken into account. For eight or ten of the Republics of the Union will be served by the Canadian line, if it continues, or injured by its failure, if it fails. The rapid passages of the steamers I speak of are known to every newspaper reader. The Hungarian once made three consecutive trips in 27 days 3 hours. And, rapid as has been the passage across the ocean hitherto, it will, ere long, be more so. The Company have in course of construction a vessel which is under contract to run from Quebec to Liverpool in less than eight days. And as the Grand Trunk Railway is finished to River du Loup—115 miles below Quebec, where passengers and mails will be disembarked next Summer—the passage from side to side will in all likelihood be accomplished within the week. But the Company cannot stand against the Cunard and Lever lines, subsidized by the wealthiest empire in the civilized world. England is overweighting this young colony, her progeny, in the race across the Atlantic.

We are discussing several methods of relief. We find that England subsidizes lines to all her other independent colonies—Australia, and the Indies, East and West. She even pays £14,000 per annum, out of £24,000, which is given for the coast service of the New Zealand colonies. Why should she not assist us too? Then, in the second place, we are debating the possibility of amalgamating ours with either the Cunard or Lever line, the chief difficulty being that we insist on our route being used in Summer by the main line (that is, via the North Channel out of the Irish Sea, and via the Straits of Belle Isle into the Gulf of St. Lawrence), and the other part of the service being done by branch steamers. And in the third place, we are making some rather vague proposals for carrying mails for the Pacific overland. When the British Parliament and our Parliament meet, there will very likely be some tall talking about the matter, especially here. Meanwhile we are doing what we can in the newspapers to make our voice heard across the Atlantic, and both our Finance Minister and our Postmaster-General are in England, and neither of them asleep.

I will keep you informed as to the progress of affairs. Meantime, I will consider you as somewhat interested to know whether ALLAN EDMONSTONE & Co., will share the fate of Mr. COLLINS.

THE LONDON SHOEBLACK BRIGADE.—Some interesting items of the working of the Shoeblack Brigade are furnished in the report of the East-London branch of that organization for the year just closing. It stated that during the year 371 boys had been admitted, of whom 173 had been received into the Refuge, and been disposed of as follows: 25 have obtained situations, 7 have been restored to their parents, 10 are employed as shoeblacks, 8 as brushmakers, 18 as tailors, 4 have emigrated to Canada, 20 have been dismissed as incorrigible, and 81 have absconded. The total number of shoeblacks in the Blue Brigade are 80, and their united earnings for the year amounted to £1,079.

We read in Galignani: "On Saturday last, (Nov. 19,) the Emperor gave a grand shooting party in the grand park of Compiègne. The game killed amounted to 930 head. The Emperor and Prince de Metternich brought down the greatest number. The Emperor takes a walk about the town and neighborhood of Compiègne two or three times a week, accompanied by an aide-de-camp. The townspeople have the good taste to respect his Majesty's incognito by manifesting no curiosity, but merely saluting him respectfully as he passes. His Majesty, the afternoon before last, accompanied by one of his guests, went to the Rue Jean d'Arc to visit the ruins of the tower which formerly defended the entrance to Compiègne, at the extremity of the old bridge (now demolished) by which the Maid of Orleans made the unlucky sortie in which she fell into the hands of the English. The Emperor afterwards walked to the Hotel de Ville and visited the museum. On the occasion of the Empress's fête the Prince Imperial recited a compliment to her Majesty, but his memory failing him before he got to the end of his little speech, he supplied the want of words by throwing himself into his mother's arms. The Empress received the embrace of her son with an emotion which was shared by all the persons present."

The Philadelphia Argus has the following anecdote of Barney Williams: "It will be recollected that, upon the first evening of his present engagement in this city, he alluded to the 'Old Walnut' and its former management in terms of touching gratitude. It was at this theatre that he made his début and worked his way to popularity. This he has never forgotten. In all his travels through Europe, and amidst a theatrical success of an almost unparalleled character, he stated in a speech to the audience at the 'Walnut,' his heart always traveled back fondly and gratefully to this old and favorite establishment. But to the point. Barney lately inquired after his old manager, E. A. Marshall, Esq., and learning that he had met with sad reverses and misfortunes, he, in the promptest and kindest manner, at once tendered his own and wife's services in getting up a complimentary benefit—not only promising to give his gratuitous services on the occasion, but also pledged himself to make it a substantial benefit in a pecuniary sense. This speaks volumes in favor of 'an Irishman's heart,' and the big one in the bosom of Barney Williams. Mr.

twelvemonth's leave of absence. He intends to employ that time in company with his brother, the Count de Paris, his old tutor, M. de Brauvoir, and Capt. Merin, in visiting Greece, Egypt and Palestine.

Capt. Penny, the well-known Arctic voyager, arrived on the 21st ult. at Aberdeen, from the whale-fishing at Cumberland (of Baffin). He left Aberdeen at the end of last June in the Lady Franklin, and returns thus early with three whales, about sixty tons of oil, and a few tons of bone.

Professor Sedgwick has received a communication from Dr. Livingstone, dated "River Zambesi, East Africa, May 27." Dr. Livingstone reports the discovery of a real highland lake region, where the inhabitants cultivate cotton very extensively, while he adds "every one spins and weaves it."

After an absence of several years, Mr. Charles Kean appeared on Saturday evening, the 10th ult., at the Dublin Theatre Royal, in the character of Hamlet. The house is one of large dimensions, capable of accommodating a very numerous audience, and it was densely crowded in every part.

LAW REPORTS.

General Sessions.

BRISK BUSINESS—SEVERAL CASES DISPOSED OF.

The work of this Court yesterday was brisk, and many cases were disposed of, the Recorder sitting to a late hour to make up for the time lost by the election recess.

John Christopher was tried and convicted on a charge of stealing a watch and chain worth $75 from Mr. Albert W. Berg, on the 17th of October. He was sentenced to three years and four months in the State Prison.

William Eddo, indicted on a charge of stealing clothing from Mr. Charles Jolley, valued at $28 which brought the offence up to the standard of grand larceny, pleaded guilty of petit larceny, and was sent for four months to the Penitentiary.

John Quinn pleaded guilty to an assault on Richard Hargan, on August 16, and was remanded till Saturday for sentence.

George Werner was tried and convicted of keeping a very disreputable house in Thirtieth-street. The evidence disclosed the fact that policemen are not above taking bribes from the proprietors of such houses, to screen them from difficulty. Werner was sentenced by the Recorder to six months in the Penitentiary and fined $100, to remain in prison till the fine is paid.

Edward Costello pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving stolen goods. Not sentenced.

John Smith, indicted with Francis Dunn, on a charge of robbing Andrew J. Layton, on the 3d October, at Old-slip, of a wallet containing bank-bills and a check, worth in all $36, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to three years and four months in the State Prison.

Mary Mann, a fair but frail lady, deeply veiled, pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny, and was sent to the State Prison for two years and six months.

James McCann pleaded guilty to a felonious assault on John Lewis and Arthur MacAlister. He was sent, on each charge, to the Penitentiary for one year.

Josephine Hewlett pleaded guilty to forgery in the fourth degree. Not sentenced.

The somewhat celebrated case of Henry Karples, charged with fraudulently obtaining goods from the firm of Hecker & Brothers, flour merchants, by whom he was employed as a clerk, was again argued by Mr. Edmon Blankman. The Recorder reserved his decision.

United States Circuit Court—Dec. 8—Before Judge Ingersoll.

William B. Dinsmore, President, &c., vs. Nathan Maroney.—This was an action brought by the Adams Express Company, of which the plaintiff was President, to recover the sum of $50,000, alleged by them to have been converted by the defendant, who was the resident agent of the Company at Montgomery, Alabama. The plaintiff's allegation is that there were two packages, one of ten thousand dollars and one of forty thousand dollars which were to have been sent to Columbus, Georgia, but by misdirection were sent to Montgomery and there converted by the defendant. The defendant denies the whole matter. The case is still on.

For the plaintiffs, Mr. Cutting and Mr. O'Conor, and Messrs. Blatchford, Seward and Griswold. For the defendant, Mr. Joachimssen and Mr. Ashmead.

A Sheriff Case.

Charles Watson and another vs. James C. Willett, Sheriff.—This was an action against the Ex-Sheriff to recover damages for an alleged wrongful seizure of plaintiff's goods, and was tried before Justice PIERREPONT, in the Superior Court. The complaint alleged that the Sheriff, or his agents, carried off about $800 worth of the plaintiff's goods, consisting of wines, schnapps, &c., &c., in December, 1857, and that the goods have since been detained.

The defendant set up that the goods were seized under process issued in pursuance of a judgment obtained against one S. Edwin Knower, by Patrick Monaghan; that at the time the goods were taken they were in the possession of the said S. Edwin Knower, the judgment debtor in that action. It appeared that the defendant in the former case, against whose goods execution was issued, was in business at No. 51 Beaver-street with Samuel Knower, his father, and Watson, plaintiff herein, who was a friend; that at the time the goods were seized the said defendant was the ostensible owner of the goods and the chief proprietor. The jury were directed to bring in a sealed verdict on Monday morning.

Mr. Hart for plaintiff; Brown, Hall & Vanderpoel for defendants.

Verdict.

George F. Pemston et al. vs. Thomas Gilmartin.—This was an action to recover for the use of a vessel a voyage to Greytown and back, viâ St. Kitts, and was tried before Justice SLOSSON, in the Superior Court.

The particulars of the case were reported in Thursday's TIMES. The trial resulted in a verdict for the plaintiffs for $1,941 47, and the Court allowed $50 thereon.

J. D. Hall for plaintiffs; E. Terry for defendant.

New Rules.

COMMON PLEAS.—The following rules have been adopted by the Court of Common Pleas for the year 1860:

1. That a new General Calendar for the Trial Terms be made up for the year 1860, notes of issue for which must be filed before Saturday, the 24th day of December, instant, specifying whether the issue is to be tried "by a jury," or "by the Court without a jury;" also, stating thereon its number upon the Calendar of 1859, and if it has been marked "Down," when it was so marked.

No cause will be entered upon the Calendar, unless the note of issue conforms to these requirements.

2. There will be but one Calendar made up for the year 1860, and but one note of issue need be filed in any cause. Causes noticed after the January term will be placed at the foot of the General Calendar, according to their dates of issue. Causes marked Down will be placed at the end of the Calendar.

3. Causes may be generally reserved by a written consent of the attorneys, filed at any time before the case is on the day calendar. Cases so reserved, may afterwards be placed upon the day calendar, on the application of either party to the Judge at Chambers, provided two days' previous notice of such application be given to the adverse party.

4. All causes marked "Off for the term," shall have priority at the succeeding term, and will be placed at the head of the calendar therefor.

5. The calendar of causes to be tried by the Court without a jury, will be called at the trial terms on the Fourth Mondays of January, March, May, and November.

6. Fifteen causes will be placed on each day calendar, and no calendar will be made for Saturdays.

7. At the General Terms, in appeal cases arising in this Court, the parties may by consent reserve the argument until the second week in term, when all so reserved will be called in their order on the calendar. But in appeals from the Marine and Justices' Courts no such reservation will be allowed, and counsel therein must be prepared for the argument when the case is reached in its order.

8. In any action on contract, where there is reason to believe that the defence is interposed for delay, and that the trial will not occupy more than one hour, the plaintiff may, upon a notice of four days, apply at Chambers to have the cause placed upon the Special Calendar for short cases, and which will be made up for the last Friday in each trial term.

The notice must be accompanied by the affidavits (if any) upon which the motion will be founded.

If the motion be granted, the order to that effect shall forthwith be delivered to the Clerk, with a written notice specifying the number of the cause on the General Calendar.

Should the trial occupy more than one hour, it may be suspended in the discretion of the Judge holding the Court, and the cause will thereupon be placed at the foot of the General Calendar, unless otherwise specially ordered. By order of the Court,

NATHANIEL JARVIS, JR., Clerk.

Canadian is quiet at former rates. There were 300 bbls. sold, including inferior to very choice extra, chiefly at $5 45@$6 60 ℔ bbl. Rye Flour sells slowly at $3 65@$4 40 for fine and superfine, ℔ bbl. Corn Meal continues dull and heavy at $4 for Jersey, and $4 25 for Brandywine, ℔ bbl.

GRAIN—Wheat has been more freely offered and prices have favored buyers, yet the reported sales have not exceeded 37,500 bushels, including good white Canada at $1 42; Milwaukee Club, part at $1 20; and good red Texas at $1 32½ ℔ bushel. Corn has been quiet, sales having been confined to 15,000 bush. at 84c.@87c. for new yellow Jersey and Southern; 83c.@90c. for new white Southern; 93c. for old do. do.; and 94c.@95c. for old round yellow, ℔ bush. Oats are in demand and are firm, including Prince Edward's Island at 47c.; Canada at 45½c. @46c.; Western, at 45c.@46c., State, at 45½c.@46c.; Jersey and Pennsylvania, at 41c.@44c.; and Southern at 40c.@43c ℔ bushel. Mr. WM. G. CUTTING notices the week's business in the principal kinds of Breadstuffs, thus: "The market for State and Western Flour has been less active this week. The demand has been restricted. The regular home trade have been the principal purchasers. Shippers bought freely—on one or two days—but otherwise moved cautiously. The latest news from Liverpool has been discouraging to export operations. The inquiry from speculators has been limited. On Thursday, light receipts and cold weather had the effect of checking the downward tendency of the market. Canal and river navigation is likely to be soon suspended for the season, and holders anticipate some results favorable to their interests, as the consequence of this event. Yesterday, a light business was transacted at essentially unaltered prices. Only a small amount, chiefly of extra State, was purchased for export Wheat has been sparingly dealt in this week. The demand has been spiritless. It has been mainly for shipment, and for milling. Prices have been generally offered which have been unsatisfactory to holders. On this account, business has been restricted. Speculators have not evinced much disposition to purchase. The tendency of the market has been decidedly favorable to buyers. Yesterday, the sales were moderate, and the market was depressed. The total sales of Wheat, during the week, amounted to 125,000 bushels. Corn has been more freely offered than it has been wanted by purchasers, and prices have tended downward. The market is bare of mixed Western. Rye has been in moderate demand, at about previous rates. Barley has been inquired for, and desirable lots have been held with confidence. Oats have been unsettled, closing, however, with a fair demand at firmer prices."

HAY—Sales have been reported of 1,100 bales, at full prices.

HIDES—The demand this week has been spiritless. Dealers refuse to operate unless at a considerable reduction in prices, which mort holders are unwilling to concede. The receipts are liberal, and will be large for the next two months. There are at present several cargoes from Buenos Ayres, &c., overdue. The receipts this week have been 33,600 Hides. The stock in first hands amounts to 246,000; same time last year, 76,000. The principal sales during the week have been: 3,000 Buenos Ayres, 23c., 8 months; 2,500 Orinoco, at auction, 20c., 6 months; 1,200 San Juan, 19c., 6 months; 2,500 Texas, and 1,000 Para, on private terms; 400 dry-salted Matamoras, 15½c., 6 months; 400 Porto Cabello, 19c., 6 months.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Senate was not in session yesterday. In the House of Representatives, Mr. Kellogg, of Illinois, resumed his explanations in regard to the Tribune and Mr. Douglas, and finally brought Mr. Logan of that State to his feet to rebut the insinuations of his colleague. Mr. McClernand, of the same delegation, also read a letter from Mr. Douglas, denying the charge of complicity with the Republicans. The discussion between Messrs. Logan and Kellogg at length became so violent as to render a personal collision imminent, and but for the friends of the belligerents seizing them as they rushed toward each other there must have been a repetition of scenes unhappily too frequent at Washington in these latter days. The immediate effect of the disturbance was to impress all present with the instant need of organization, and to that end a third vote for Speaker was ordered. It gave 110 to Sherman; 88 to Bocock; 20 to Gilmer, and scattering 13. Necessary to a choice, 116. Mr. Hickman, Anti-Lecompton Democrat, then moved a resolution identical in terms with that which elected Mr. Banks, under similar circumstances, and as soon as a vote can be had upon it, it will doubtless be passed, and place Mr. Sherman in the Chair. Our Correspondent informs us that, pending the election of a legal Speaker, it is proposed by some of the Southern Opposition to give Mr. Phelps, of Missouri, as the senior member, provisional authority to preserve order. This measure will be formally proposed in the House on Monday, when it is thought by some that enough of the Southern and Northern Independent Opposition may be brought to its support to procure its adoption.

With regard to the President's Message, it is stated that but one proof has been drawn from the types, and that was in the custody of the President himself. Another reporter states that if the House be not organized by Tuesday the Message will be sent in without further delay.

The statement that Gen. Scott has returned to San Francisco, there to await further dispatches from Washington, is pronounced to be incorrect. No further instructions are to be forwarded; and he has no reason to anticipate any. The real purpose of his visit to California is to examine the site of a proposed fortification at Lake Point, in that State, and to pronounce on the necessity of such works there. Gen. Totten is his associate in the Commission.

The election in Kansas has resulted decidedly in the Republican interest. Every county heard from has given a Republican majority, thus electing the entire State ticket of that party.

Our correspondent in Canada observes that serious fears for the permanency of the Canadian steam line to Liverpool are entertained, in consequence of the loss of the Indian. That vessel was uninsured, and as the company has hitherto had to contend against the disadvantage of a non-paying business, there is reason to apprehend an abandonment of the enterprise. Nothing, save a subsidy from the British Treasury as generous as that accorded to the Cunarders, can prevent this deplorable result. To obtain this perfectly just concession, the Canadians are using every means of acting on public opinion at home, and upon the authorities in London, not without hopes of success.

The New-York State Canals, the Commissioners have announced, are to be closed on Monday next.

Hon. Theodore Sedgwick, a distinguished member of the New-York Bar, and United States District Attorney for this district, died on Thursday evening, at his family residence, in Stockbridge. He was widely and favorably known as a lawyer of ability, and also as the author of a treatise on the "Measure of Damages," and another upon "Statutes." The first-mentioned of these books has attained a wide celebrity, not only in this country, but also in Europe. Mr. Sedgwick's death was suitably noticed in several of the Courts yesterday, which adjourned upon the announcement. The wife of Mr. Fernando Wood, the Mayor elect, died very suddenly yesterday morning, after giving birth to a child. In respect to Mayor Wood, and to the well-known virtues of the deceased, the Board of Councilmen met, and, having received a communication on the subject, passed resolutions of regret and sympathy. Similar action was had in the Board of Canvassers.

A destructive fire occurred yesterday morning in the Eighth Ward. It originated in the pianoforte manufactory of Messrs. Lighte, Newton & Bradbury, which was entirely destroyed, with a large loss to that firm, although they had insurances to the amount of $39,500. Before the firemen could get the flames under control, they had spread to buildings on each side and in the rear of the piano manufactory. Several of them were occupied as tenement houses, and the poor families who had their abodes in them were severe sufferers. Some members of Engine Company No. 11 were injured by the falling of the walls.

The call for the meeting of citizens to express the sympathies of New-York with the people of the South, and to attest the popular devotion to the Union, was issued last evening. The place and time are still undetermined.

The Commissioners of Police, at their meeting yesterday, resolved to sit with open doors on and after the 1st of January.

The Stock Market of yesterday continued the improvement of Thursday, and some of the Shares were still higher: New-York Central, 80¾@¾; Panama, 134½. Erie Bonds of 1883 rose to 80¼ @ cent., believed to be on a contemplated arrangement to pay off the overdue issue of 1859, which would make the former the second mortgage. Money worked easier. Exchange was dull, because of no outward European mail to-day.

The sales of Cotton reached 3,000 bales, including 2,000 bales in transitu, at a shade firmer rates. The movements in Breadstuffs and Provisions were restricted. Prices of Flour, Wheat, Corn and Pork tended downward. Coffee and Rice were more sought after. Candles, Hay, Hops, Lime, Spirits Turpentine, Linseed Oil, Tallow and Whisky were in request. Hides and Leather were rather sparingly inquired for. A moderate business was transacted in Sugar, Hops, Metals, Seeds and Foreign Liquors. Tobacco attracted more attention. The Freight engagements were less extensive.

Drift of the Republican Party.

We have more than once stated our belief, since the last Presidential election, that the Republican Party could no longer stand exclusively upon the platform which carried it through that canvass. The cardinal feature of their platform then was, resistance, by Congressional legislation, to the extension of Slavery into free territory of the United States. This was the primary, prominent, and controlling object for which the party was organized. The repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and the Pro-Slavery invasion of Kansas had made such resistance necessary, and the organization, therefore, had its basis and its strength in an existing necessity of the times. The great mass of the people of the Free States were opposed to such extension of Slavery, and were ready to take any legitimate action necessary to prevent it. The strength of this principle, and the conviction of imminent danger forced upon the public mind, gave the Republican Party the immense vote which it received in 1856.

This issue has disappeared. Kansas is no longer in jeopardy—it has been secured to Freedom. The principle of Congressional legislation for the exclusion of Slavery from the territories, has been annulled by a decision of the Supreme Court, and, even if it had not, there is no territory so exposed to the danger as to demand its exercise. The principle of Popular Sovereignty, moreover, however it may be questioned in form, has been established in fact, and will hereafter settle all disputes that may arise concerning Slavery in new territories of the United States. The controversy upon this point is over; and the contest between the Free and the Slave States of the Union for supremacy in the Federal Councils has been decided, as Senator Seward declared two years ago, in favor of the North.

The Republicans, therefore, must have a modified platform for the struggle of 1860. And it is becoming a matter of considerable interest to know what will be its leading features. Will Slavery be the cardinal topic on which it will rest? And what will be the particular phase of Slavery which will be presented for the public judgment? What will the Republican Party propose to do in regard to Slavery, as the reason why they should be placed in power?

It is alleged by its opponents that the Republican Party is becoming rapidly Abolitionized;—that instead of limiting its aims to preventing the extension of Slavery, it is preparing to wage open war on Slavery itself in the Southern States;—that it is thus gradually throwing aside its national character, and becoming openly a sectional, Anti-Slavery, Abolition party. Its leading organs deny the charge in words,—but the very terms of the denial involve a substantial admission of its truth.

The Tribune, for example, which claims and is acknowledged to be a Republican journal, holds the following language in its issue of yesterday:

"You know that we Anti-Slavery men are not 'sectional' in our purposes and aspirations—that, on the contrary, we are seeking to encourage and inspire the South to cast off the burden which has caused her to lag so far behind the North in every element of growth and greatness—know that if the South had thrown off Slavery when New-York did, her population, wealth, intelligence, would have been to-day at least double what they are. You know that mistaken Old John Brown, and his brave sons with him at Harper's Ferry, laid down their lives not to injure but benefit the South—that they and their comrades, dead, or about to be killed, were the least sectional of human beings. They sacrificed their all in an unlawful but heroic effort to benefit those whom they had never seen."

The Tribune thus declares that an armed invasion of Southern States for the purpose of liberating their slaves, is not a sectional movement;—that men who engage in it cannot be called sectional men;—and by necessary inference, that a political party which proclaims that to be its purpose, is not a sectional party. After such a definition of terms as that, of what possible use is a disclaimer of "sectionality,"—or a proclamation that the party is purely and thoroughly national in its motives and its plans? John Brown and his companions, according to the Tribune, were the "least sectional of human beings." If the Republican Party, therefore, were to imitate the conduct and follow the example of John Brown, it would also be the "least sectional" of political parties, according to the same authority.

The sophistry of all this scarcely needs to be pointed out. The Tribune considers that only sectional which aims at the advantage of one section or the injury of another; and as the abolition of Slavery would be, in its judgment, a blessing to both sections, Abolitionism itself cannot be considered sectional.

But the important point for the public is, whether the Republican Party accepts this interpretation,—whether it is content to be only as "sectional" as John Brown, and whether it proposes to plant itself upon the platform thus occupied by the Tribune. We need scarcely say that we do not believe it does:—certainly not, unless it has entirely changed its character since 1856, and is prepared to put itself under new leaders, and go into the Presidential canvass under an entirely different flag. But the drift, it must be confessed, is distinctly in that direction. The tendency of the party, as indicated by the language of its leading organs, has been towards a much more open and pronounced Abolitionism than was thought of or tolerated during the last campaign. The Republicans will find it necessary before long to define their position on this subject somewhat more distinctly than has been done hitherto: and it may not be amiss for their prominent men to give it some little attention meantime. The Tribune's language is certainly not calculated to increase public confidence in the nationality of the party which it represents.

An Example at Last.—An emigrant runner was for a wonder convicted, on Thursday, of assault and battery, and Recorder Barnard in remanding him for sentence, was compelled to announce in open court, that if any appeals were made to him outside on behalf of the prisoner, his sentence would only be the heavier. These emigrant runners are, as everybody knows, generally swindlers and bullies of the very worst kind, but the leading part they play in the politics of the City generally enables them either to escape the law altogether, or if convicted, to get off with a nominal sentence.

The extent to which these men are allowed to prey upon emigrants has long been the scandal and disgrace of the City, and their immunity from punishment, even after a jury had found them guilty, has been long one of the most disgusting abuses of our administration of criminal justice. We were rapidly arriving at the conclusion that they were a visitation of which only Providence could rid us, when, at last, Recorder Barnard evinces some sense of their merits, and the character of their depredations, and now appears disposed to deal with them as they deserve, when[illegible] may serve to give people [illegible] fortune not to be behind the [illegible] the horrible abuses by which even our judicial system is marked, when a criminal Judge is compelled to protect himself from annoyance by a public announcement that he will listen to no intercessions from politicians out of doors, on behalf of a convicted criminal. Such a precaution ought not only to be unnecessary, but unheard of; and it may serve to give the public some idea of the rugged virtue of which a man needs to be possessed to administer justice faithfully in New-York.

The Wise Correspondence.

Gov. Wise is naturally and by instinct a pyrotechnist. He can never perform even the simplest duties of public life without a magnificent display of fireworks. Whether he carries this habit into private life,—whether he breakfasts under the inspiration of rockets, shaves himself by the glare of Roman candles, and issues orders to his cook and groom with the accompaniment of blazing wheels and roaring cannon, we cannot say. But, if not, he clearly governs his private conduct by a very different rule from that which guides his official action. He seems incapable of treating any topic in a direct, straight-forward style, and of dealing with any subject, however trifling, without the most elaborate and imposing display. As a matter of course, the affair at Harper's Ferry was a godsend to him:—and he has improved, with marvelous diligence and vigor, the opportunity which it presented of fastening the eyes of the startled world upon Virginia and her miraculous chief magistrate.

His correspondence with President Buchanan and Gov. Chase, of Ohio, which we published yesterday, confirms the impression which the public had generally formed of his conduct during the whole affair. It is thoroughly irrational and absurd from beginning to end. With every disposition to make allowance for the natural excitability of the Governor's temperament, it is difficult to pardon the composition of such epistles as these by the chief magistrate of a great State, in the transaction of business with the President and with other governors. We think it most unfortunate, both for Virginia and the Union, that the Harper's Ferry émeute should not have found somebody at the helm of affairs in Richmond gifted with discretion and judgment at least moderately proportioned to his zeal.

Gov. Wise writes in the first place to the President announcing his intention, on the occurrence of certain contingencies which he seems confidently to anticipate, to violate the laws and Constitution of the United States by an armed invasion of adjoining States. He declares that "he has information, specific enough to be reliable," that a conspiracy of formidable extent in means and numbers had been formed in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New-York, to rescue Brown and his associates;—"that places in Maryland, Ohio and Pennsylvania had been occupied as dépôts and rendezvous by these desperadoes;" and then goes on to declare "with all the might of meaning," whatever that may be, that "if another invasion assailed Virginia, he would pursue the criminals with an armed force into any State or Territory, and punish them wherever arms could reach them," and requests the President, therefore, "to keep the peace between the States," by calling out troops of the United States. A similar document was sent to Gov. Chase, of Ohio. Now, common courtesy, as well as common sense, required Gov. Wise to communicate to the President at least the grounds for these horrible forebodings, and to designate the places where these desperadoes held their rendezvous unguarded. Neither Mr. Buchanan nor Mr. Chase, we believe, command troops under the orders of Gen. Wise, and when they are required to put forces in the field on his requisition, their judgment as well as their fears have to be appealed to. Wise has to give not only his belief, but the grounds for it, and allow his fellow officials the privilege which the laws and Constitution award them, of judging whether there exists sufficient cause for making martial displays, spreading panic through the country, and incurring the risk of making themselves ridiculous.

The information on which Wise relied, might not, and probably would not have been sufficient to satisfy people of less exuberant imagination than himself; and in any case his superiors and equals in official rank are entitled to inspection of it, before consenting to imitate his form of proceeding. We trust that if he has the good fortune to get into office again he will remember that there is no provision either in State or Federal laws, or in the Constitution, which places the forces of any State but his own at his disposition, and that whenever he wants the aid of other States, he will have to make out a case in black and white, with time, date, place and circumstance, before a single company will march to his assistance.

Next to the vanity of supposing that he has only to "apprehend" or "suspect," to make the Union rise in arms, is the insolence of announcing that in case a certain offence which he specifies, be committed by citizens of other States, he will disregard the provision made by the laws for their apprehension and punishment, and march an armed force in pursuit of them through the whole Union if necessary. The only thing that palliates this rhodomontade is its extreme silliness; but unfortunately that which would be only silly and contemptible in an individual, is, in the Governor of a great State something much more reprehensible. Our laws secure to every private individual the privilege of making a fool of himself with impunity, and when Mr. Wise goes into private life, he may revel in that luxury without being troubled by much serious comment from anybody; but as long as he is Governor of Virginia, and, above all, at such a crisis as this, we have a right to expect from him the language of soberness and truth, and the right to call his insolent extravagance a crime not only against his own State, but against the whole country. Nobody knows better than himself that the evils under which Virginia is at this moment laboring, and which the whole North and the whole South are deprecating, are aggravated much more by the vapid threats and wild and selfish exaggerations of men in power, than by the senseless ravings of obscure fanatics.

There is a quiet rebuke conveyed, even in the calm tone of the replies, both of the President and Governor Chase, which he would do well, now that he has done compounding his incendiary messages, to take to his laboratory and ponder over.

Both are written with coolness and good judgment,—evincing no disposition either to underrate the dangers reported to exist, or to evade any part of their official duty in meeting them. But neither of these officials so far lost control of his intellectual faculties under the pressure of the emergency, as to feel called upon to violate the Constitution, or resort to [illegible] and alarming remedies for a danger [illegible] which, so far as they had been informed, was purely imaginary.

Sympathy with the South.

Boston and Philadelphia, in public meetings, made up from the best-known and most responsible classes of their citizens, have protested the sincerity of their devotion to the Union, and the strength of their hostility to any such interference with the rights, the safety and the dignity of the Southern States as was attempted by John Brown at Harper's Ferry. New-York, the natural commercial metropolis of the nation, is preparing to follow their example; and we are gravely assured by men conspicuous in public life, that the South awaits our action with a calm determination to be governed by its character and value, in her decision upon the "vital question of dissolution." In other words, the impression is sought to be made upon us, that the permanence of those grand institutions which were established by our fathers upon the ruins of the royal dominion of Britain, really depends in no inconsiderable degree upon the complexion of a possible public meeting in the City of New-York.

Now we have not a word to say in discouragement of those who are anxious to prove to the South that neither John Brown, nor Wendell Phillips, nor Rev. Dr. Cheever, ought to be taken as fair types of the dominant feeling and opinion of the Free States of America on the matter of Slavery in the South. We do not even complain that such proof should be required by our Southern kinsmen. For it is perfectly idle to ignore the fact that for the last five years the question of the relations between American Slavery and American Freedom has been the leading question of all our politics, or the equally indisputable fact that a considerable number of Northern men have discussed that question with an overbearing and aggressive emphasis too well calculated to sting the self-respect of the Southern States into angry and therefore irrational retaliation.

Invaded in a moment of profound peace—startled from their dreams of national security by the advent of a new Peter the Hermit, preaching an eternal crusade against their domestic order and their notions of public law—the people of the South may lawfully and reasonably demand of the North an open repudiation of practical excesses which every sensible man must admit to be equally incompatible with the honor of the Free States and with the peace of the South. No matter what may be the views which one or another Northern man may entertain of Slavery in the abstract, the bare proposition which assumes a right on the part of any Northern man to march with an armed following at his back from Ohio into Kentucky, or from Pennsylvania into Virginia, on a mission of emancipation, is its own immediate refutation. John Brown had no more right to do or to try to do the things which on his own showing it was his purpose to do in Virginia, than he would have had to carry off Queen Victoria from Osborne House in order to establish a republic in Great Britain. This the South very well knows; but if it can be of any use to conservative men at the South to understand that this is the unquenchable conviction of nine-tenths of the Northern people, the necessary evidence of the truth can be very easily produced. If the case were otherwise; if the acts of John Brown represented anything like a ruling public opinion at the North, we should hold the South recreant to itself for remaining for a day longer in the bonds of the Union.

Be Slavery right or wrong, the South cannot consent to see itself dragooned into Abolitionism, without losing every claim to the regard of honorable men. On this point there can hardly be two opinions among reasoning creatures. But it is very well worth consideration how far the cause of common sense and loyalty is to be served by meetings convened expressly for the purpose of asserting that all Northern men are not lunatics or traitors. A "Union" meeting, at the present crisis of our national affairs is not to be lightly summoned in the paltry spirit of political partizanship. If we are to offer our Southern brethren nothing better than a demonstration, which is to be interpreted as condensing within itself the whole conservative feeling of this Metropolis, we shall give them a stone when they ask us for bread. The simple truth is, that the whole feeling of this Metropolis is conservative. Whatever may be the political affinities of men in relation to the great parties which now contest the sway of the State, their cordial, honest and unsullied feeling on the subject of the Union and of Southern Rights, is one of entire fealty to the Constitution. This is the feeling on which the South must rely for the only sympathy which can be of any practical value to it or to us. To draw an arbitrary line between those masses of the Northern people which are opposed to Slavery as a matter of principle, and those classes which regard the institution with practical indifference, and then to aver that the former are the friends of treason and of Harper's Ferry invasions, while the latter are the only true Constitutional citizens of the North, is the most foolish as well as the most unjust thing that can possibly be done. Southern men are not simpletons. They read the Northern papers; they know the names and they understand the political principles of the men who really lead and represent Northern opinion. If the cities of the North can offer them no better guarantee of Northern good-will and Northern fidelity to Constitutional obligations, than manifestations which represent the least popular, and therefore the least powerful, elements of Northern society, they will be at liberty to conclude that their worst prognostications have been fulfilled, and that the Union has indeed become an impossibility.

Let the North speak then; but let it speak honestly and fully. To deny the Anti-Slavery feeling of the North is worse than folly. To pretend that the North is represented where that sentiment is suppressed, is to insult the understanding of the South. The only durable and decisive good which can be done by Northern speaking now, must be done by an explicit assertion of the unquestionable though madly questioned fact, that not only the Conservative and Pro-Slavery North, but the whole Northern people, including the masses of the so-called Republican and Anti-Slavery Parties, are earnestly and sincerely bent on preserving the fabric of the existing Union, and on doing justice to the rights, the privileges and the prejudices even of the Southern members of our confederated Republic.

Something Worthy of Attention.—The controversy concerning the reading of the Bible in the Public Schools has led to one injustice, which ought to be promptly remedied. The Board of Education has decided that it shall be read in all the Public Schools. The Trustees in several of the Wards have directed the teachers not to read it. The teachers are employed by the Trustees, and paid by the Board of Education. If they disobey the Trustees, they are ejected from their posts:—if they disobey the Board, they are deprived of their salaries.

Now there are many teachers who are actually in this dilemma. The right of the Board to compel the reading of the Bible, and that of the Trustees to forbid it, are matters of law, to be determined by the Courts. The teachers cannot decide it, and they have naturally and necessarily followed the directions of those at whose hands they hold their appointments. And for this their pay has been withheld by the Board. For some months now they have not received a dollar of the wages they have earned: and many of them are on the verge of suffering for want of the necessaries of life, merely because they cannot get their pay.

This is a wrong which the Board of Education ought at once to redress. Why should they throw upon these poor teachers all the weight and responsibility of the controversy in which they are involved? The point at issue can never be settled in this way. They can accomplish nothing toward the solution of the question, or the establishment of their own legal rights. There must certainly be some way of reaching the result at which they aim, without starving teachers, male and female, by withholding the wages they have faithfully earned. Common humanity and a sense of justice ought to prevent the members of the Board from persisting in the perpetration of such a wrong.

City and Suburban Traffic.

The reduction of fares, and a high and safe increase of speed for City, suburban, and "accommodation" passenger traffic, by saving untold millions of cents and half-hours, and by expanding the practical boundaries of cities and large towns, would result in more substantial good to the public at large, than would the completion of the Pacific Railroad or the Atlantic Telegraph. It would, not only incidentally, but directly and immediately, pay each person who ever has occasion for other locomotion than walking; that is to say, the whole people, without exception.

To do this very thing, without risk of failure, and at a cost most trifling compared with that of the other great works named, is simply to do what has been done, tested, and proved. However many novelties might be developed by the regular practice of it, the success of cheap, fast, and safe steam-locomotion, at all times, and in all places, does not depend on the first untried, experimental, or problematical principle or device.

We have on the one hand, railways, at say $40,000 per mile, or that adaptation of steam to very high speeds and "long" traffic, which, although unnecessarily expensive in working, is, on the whole, a satisfactory accommodation to the public, as far as it goes. On the other hand, for the short but tremendous traffic of cities and suburbs—the traffic which, at regular and irregular periods of day and night, demands above all others the utmost promptness and the highest safe speed—the traffic which, unlike premeditated journeys, can wait for no tides or time tables, but is a very element in the every-day vicissitudes of business life—for a traffic of which the perfect accommodation would be the annihilation of short spaces on instant notice—what have we? We have simply what the antediluvians had—horses, which at six miles per hour, are more expensive than steam on the same road, which at eight miles per hour will not pay wear and ear expenses, and for which a maintained speed of twelve to fifteen miles per hour is totally impossible at any cost. It will be admitted that an average speed of from eight to ten miles per hour in cities, and twelve to fifteen miles in suburbs, is perfectly safe, provided the vehicle at that speed can be as quickly and easily stopped and guided as horses can be, at their average speed—for this is what constitutes safety. Such and greater facility of management is one of the things which locomotives have done. Add to the reversing of the steam in the engine the power of brakes, and the matter of safety is settled. Let any one ride over a City stage or car route by the side of the driver, and observe the opportunities for fast running, and he will find no obstacle to the speed of twelve or fifteen miles per hour for at least half the distance. And existing obstacles would be reduced by increasing the general rate of motion, and still more by placing the motive power within the vehicle itself, for a steam-car as long as a horse-car and its horses, would carry twice as many people, or would dispense with the room occupied by horses, if accommodating the same number of passengers. To apply the steam railway as it is, to City and suburban purposes, would be impossible, on account of its enormous cost, even if it were in any manner adapted to the nature of the traffic. On the other hand, let the merchant and mechanic contemplate the economy of a half hour saved in each day's regular and irregular trips, or the advantage of suburban quiet, health and low rents which this half hour, at the speed of a mile in four minutes, and at common omnibus fare, would place within their reach, and it will occur to them that something faster than horse-power is not only desirable, but imperatively necessary.

Supposing it to be admitted that some new, faster and cheaper system of locomotion is both desirable and safe, the remaining question is, What system will accomplish these results? We believe that a modification and adaptation of the locomotive to the peculiar necessities of the case is not only feasible, but that it is a more simple and easy thing than was its other adaptation to the excessively high speeds of common railways. In fact, it has already been done, and in some districts, especially in England, is in regular service. To show the public how greatly they need the improvement, and to open their persistently closed eyes to the facts already developed, is the great difficulty now, as it ever has been, of engineering progress from the days of Hero. The steamboat, the locomotive and the telegraph, were ready and waiting long before the people would tolerate them, and the adaptation of the locomotive and its track for city purposes is already begging for work. Must we punish ourselves for a period of years, as our fathers did, by heaping up obstacles in the path of improvements which will surely prevail in the end? Must we imitate their stupidity in the same breath with which we condemn it?

Two important facts should never be forgotten in connection with this subject:

First, popular prejudice and unbelief are too often associated with the very term "steam-carriage," as if it were an essentially new and untried thing. The fact is, however, that the principles of all successful locomotives are identical. Can the simple presence or absence of a flange on a wheel annihilate the locomotive practice of almost half a century? Does the steaming of a vehicle by one device instead of another multiply the power of the steam-engine? Will a steamboat refuse to move along a river because it is not guided by rubbing against the banks? Will water refuse to run down hill because it has not a trough to direct it?

Second, the popular comment on locomotives for common roads is that they "won't go"—that the irregularity and softness of common roads cannot be overcome by steam power. It so happens that locomotives ran on plowed ground before railways were used, and that locomotives are to-day running upon swamps where animals cannot walk. But is there any particular necessity of compelling steam vehicles to run on bad roads simply because they are not guided by flanged wheels? Certainly not. The road is a most important feature of the system, and nothing will so improve it for all traffic as the use of steam carriages, for two reasons; first, the fuel and wear and tear of horses is not practically, and cannot be, a quick and sensitive test of the condition of the road. The thousand varieties of ability, constitution, spirit and treatment of horses prevent it. But the locomotive is the very dynamometer and indicator of the road, and the gain or loss of so many pounds of fuel—i. e. of so much money—every day, from a known cause, will lead directly to the improvement of the track, just as it has done in the case of railways. Second, the feet of horses are the chief destroyers of roads. The wide wheels of locomotives would do for common roads gratis what is now done at great cost, the rolling and hardening of the surface.

The locomotive, always the same in its steam generating and applying parts, must be simply adapted, in its running parts, at a sacrifice of speed and fuel, to bad roads so long as there are bad roads. But the improvement of the way, especially in cities and suburbs, is a problem quite as important, and hardly so far advanced, as the successful application to them of the locomotive engine.

Hudson River Railroad Imposition.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Hudson River Railroad now monopolizes Hudson-street from Chambers to Canal-street, to the great inconvenience of all having business in that street. They not only have three or four switches and cross-tracks, with their T rails, (which the Common Council has commanded them to take up and replace with the grooved rail,) but they block up the street with their cars left standing on the track during the day, and obstructing the cross-walks in the space referred to. Not a day elapses that some unfortunate cartman does not suffer from being run down by their cars, driven at full speed, or catching his wheels between their tracks. Yet the company resists all the efforts to make them run small cars for the accommodation of City traffic. Is it not high time to decide whether the Railroad Companies, the Legislature, or the City, have jurisdiction over our streets? L.

Later from the Rio Grande.

THE BROWNSVILLE TROUBLE—VIDAURRI.

Fuller advices from Brownsville to the 19th ult., state that Gen. Twiggs had only countermanded the orders given to one company to march to the Rio Grande.

Capt. Tobin, of the Rangers, in his official report of the 19th ult., from Brownsville to Gov. Runnels, says one of the friendly Mexican companies from Matamoras had returned, and the other would leave on the 20th. Owing to the exhausted state of their horses, the Rangers had not yet been able to take any decisive steps against Cortinas. Capt. Tobin sent out on the 19th a party of his men to open the road between Brownsville and Point Isabel, and insure the safe transportation of the mails.

Unreliable reports were in circulation to the effect that a party of sixty Americans had encountered Cortinas and defeated him after having killed eight of his men.

Gen. Vidaurri paid Austin, Texas, a visit last week, and was received with marked honors.

The Nautilus Exploring Party.—Several of the party who left this port in August last, by the schooner Nautilus, to make examination of the alleged gold deposits among the Indian graves of Chiriqui, have returned. They report that these diggings will not pay. In examining other localities, however, valuable gold deposits were discovered in the shape of auriferous quarts, and fine gold in the beds of streams, tempting specimens of which have been exhibited. A small party is organizing to return and renew operations, which were suspended for the lack of provisions and tools. They sail on the 5th of January.

Decline of Whaling in Nantucket.—There are at present only 21 ships, one brig and one schooner employed in the whale fishery belonging to Nantucket, of an aggregate of 8,022 tons. Twenty-five years ago there were 84 ships, of 21,268 tons.—Boston Traveller.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

DOING PENANCE FOR A FOLLY.—Since BEN PERLEY POORE trundled a barrel of apples from Newbury to Boston as a forfeit for betting on the election of Mr. FILLMORE, sanguine politicians seldom allow an important election to pass without agreeing to do some absurd thing by way of demonstrating their confidence in the success of their favorite candidate. One of the latest bets of this kind was made by a Tammany Democrat last week—that should FERNANDO WOOD be elected, he would walk barefoot from the St. Nicholas Hotel to Union square behind a band of music, or forfeit three hundred dollars. Not having the money to spare, the unlucky individual, it is said, intends actually to make the tour up Broadway barefoot on Monday, according to stipulation.

LECTURE BY HON. AND REV. S. B. BELL.—The first lecture of a discourse upon "California," was delivered last evening, at the Cooper Institute, by Hon. and Rev. S. B. BELL, an ex-member of the California Senate. The lecture embraced a description of a voyage to San Francisco, and a journey to the mines. California was lauded for its wonderful soil and climate and the enterprise and manliness of its inhabitants. A second lecture, to be given on next Tuesday evening, will be devoted to a history of the famous Vigilance Committee of San Francisco.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS.—There was a full Board at the meeting of the Commissioners, yesterday, President SPILLMAN in the chair. The only business of public interest transacted, was the passage of a resolution to hold open sessions, beginning with the 1st of January.

FOR GALWAY.—The iron screw-steamer Circassian, of the New-York and Galway line, left New-York yesterday at noon for the latter port, with one hundred and sixty passengers and an average freight

FIRE IN THE EIGHTH WARD.

A Piano-forte Manufactory and Tenement Houses Destroyed—One Hundred and Twenty-five Workmen Thrown Out of Employment.

At twenty minutes before 11 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the basement of the five-story brick building, Nos. 120 and 122 Wooster-street, occupied by Messrs. LIGHTE & BRADBURYS as a manufactory of piano-fortes. While some of the workmen were boiling varnish the fluid caught fire, and before it could be extinguished the flames were beyond their control.

There were at the time in the building nearly 125 workmen, and, owing to the large quantity of turpentine, light-wood and other combustible material about them, it was with the greatest difficulty that they found their way into the street. Some of them were even compelled to jump through the windows, but nearly all escaped without injury. As the building was directly opposite the Eighth Precinct Station-house, the alarm for the Fourth District was telegraphed to the bell-towers, and in a few minutes a large force of firemen was at work. In less than ten minutes the whole building was in a blaze. The wind swept the flames across the street and the Station-house and buildings Nos. 119 and 121, next to it, were for a short time in great danger.

A three-story brick building, rear of No. 118, was soon destroyed. There were stables on the lowest floor, and JAMES B. DUROCHE, brass founder, occupied the first floor. His loss is about $500, and is not covered by insurance. WILLIAM MURTAGH, carpenter, on the second floor, loses about $300, and has no insurance. A varnish-shop, on the third floor, suffered to the extent of $200; not insured.

The front building, on the lot No. 118, was occupied by FREDERICK STEIG; the injury to furniture and stock, amounting to $300, is made good by insurance in the Bowery Insurance Company. The upper portion of this building was occupied by several families, who lost $400 worth of property. The damage to these buildings amounts to about $1,500, and is covered by insurance in the Tradesmen's Insurance Company.

The two-story frame building situated in the rear, and a small brick building in front of No. 124, were totally destroyed. GEORGE WISE occupied the front building as a stove-store and dwelling. His loss is about $500. Both of these buildings were owned by WILLIAM JONES, who suffers to the extent of $1,500, but is insured for $1,200 in the North River Insurance Company. The families living here lost about $800 worth of furniture.

The flames also communicated to a three-story brick building, situated on the front of the lot No. 126, occupied by GEORGE SCHOBER, as a boarding-house and lager-bier saloon. It suffered to the extent of $1,000, but is fully insured in the Rutgers Insurance Co. A three-story brick building, situated on the rear of this lot, occupied by several families, was also burnt down. The loss on furniture is about $500. Both front and rear buildings are owned by HENRY BRUNER. He is insured to the full extent of his loss, which is estimated at $3,000. The buildings Nos. 119 and 121 were damaged to the amount of $600, and were not insured. The dwellings Nos. 116, 118, 120 and 122 Prince-street were insured to the extent of the damage sustained, which is supposed to be $1,000. The tenement-house in the rear of No. 109½ Greene-street owned by WM. B. MUNN, suffered to the extent of $600; insured in the Knickerbocker Insurance Company. The tenants lost about $400 worth of furniture. The tenement-house No. 113 Greene-street, (rear,) sustained injury which $600 will repair, and is insured. The tenants lost about $300 in furniture, and are without insurance.

The factory of Messrs. LIGHTE & BRADBURYS was owned by HENRY BRUNER. It was 100 feet deep, 50 feet front, and valued at $15,000. It was insured for $8,500 in the following Companies: $1,500 in the Lenox; $1,500 in the St. Mark's; $3,000 in the Excelsior; and $2,500 in the Pacific. The factory was divided so as to form two separate buildings 20 feet apart. The boiler was placed between these to avoid the destruction of the buildings in case an explosion occurred. The loss of Messrs. LIGHTE & BRADBURYS on stock and machinery is about $125,000, and insured in the following Companies:

Eagle	$3,000	Market	$2,500
North Western	3,000	Everett	2,000
Metropolitan	3,000	Artizans'	2,000
Rutgers	3,000	Washington	2,000
St. Mark's	3,000	New-York and Erie	1,000
Manhattan	3,000	Kings County	2,500
Firemen's Fund	2,500	Equitable	2,500
St. Nicholas	2,000	Williamsburgh City	2,500
Total			39,500

When the walls of the factory fell, about half an hour after the fire broke out, there was a rumor that several persons were crushed beneath them, but up to a late hour last night no information had been received to confirm such a report. Engine Company No. 11 was on the corner of Prince-street at the time, and some of the bricks fell on the deck of the engine, dashing it in, and injuring several members. F. J. VANCE was badly hurt, and was taken home by some of his friends.

JACOB HALSTEAD, a member of the Eighth Precinct Police, had his face and hands burnt, but not seriously.

The steam-engine belonging to Manhattan Company No. 8, rendered most efficient service, but the large steam-engines, owned by the City, did not make their appearance.

Last evening, about 10½ o'clock, a fire broke out again in some of the debris of the ruins, and an alarm was given for the Fourth District. The firemen responded to the call, and in a short time the flames were extinguished. While proceeding to the fire, JOHN VAN HUISE, a member of Hose Company No. 19, slipped in Houston-street, and was injured on his head and one of his feet by the hose carriage striking him. His injuries are not serious.

New-York Cricket Club.

THE SEVEVTEENTH ANNUAL DINNER.

A pleasant reunion of this Club took place last evening at the Hotel of RICHARDSON & McCLOUD, corner of Maiden-land and Water-street. The Chair was occoupiedd by Mr. HENRY SHARP, President of the Club, supported by JAMES HIGHAM, Treasurer of the Club. Among the more prominent members present, we noticed H. SPRING, Secretary; Messrs. E. L. HEARNE, Mr. CAMPBELL, GEORGE HIGHAM, T. E. BENNETT, JAMES HOWELL, GEORGE A BROWNE, and a number of gentlemen connected with the Cricket and Base Ball Clubs of this City. About 100 persons sat down to dinner.

On the removal of the cloth, the President made a few brief and appropriate remarks; alluded to the past history and present prosperity of the Club; concluding with the health of the President of the United States, which was drunk with all the honors. The second toast—"Cricket all over the World"—was responded to by Mr. HAZELTINE, of the Clinton Institute. Mr. H. made a strong appeal in behalf of the encouragement of cricket and other athletic out-door sports among the youth of America.

In giving the third toast, "The memory of the late JOHN RICHARDS, the father and founder of the New-York Cricket Club," the President took occasion to refer in a feeling manner to the kindness of heart, liberality and genial disposition of their late Treasurer, Mr. RICHARDS, who, though present at the last annual meeting, they had been called upon within a few months, to follow to the grave. The toast was drank in silence, and literally in tears.

The fourth toast, "The Base Ball Players of America," was responded to by Mr. JONES; after which, the fourth regular toast, "The Health and Prosperity of the New-York Central Park Commissioners," was proposed by the President, and drank amid a tumult of cheers.

Other toasts were honored, songs sung, and the company retired about midnight, pleased with the occasion, its incidents and each other.

Police Reports.

AN ALLEGED HIGHWAYMAN.

On the 6th of last October Mrs. R. B. Roosevelt, wife of a lawyer of this City, was assaulted by a highwayman as she was driving a carriage at Throgg's Neck, Westchester County, and was made insensible from a blow on the head with a club. Her horse took fright and ran away, thus precluding the highwayman from carrying out his intention of robbing her. Some hours afterwards she was found in an unconscious condition by the road side, in the wagon. She was placed under medical care, but three or four weeks elapsed before the lady entirely recovered from her injuries. Meantime efforts were made to find out the assailant, and on Thursday last one Charles Smith was arrested at Williams' Bridge on suspicion. He was taken before Justice SANDERS, of Westchester township, who committed him to answer. The prisoner is fully identified by Mrs. Roosevelt as the person who committed the assault.

A MUTINOUS SEAMAN.

Yesterday afternoon, just previous to the departure of the ship Victoria, Charles Robinson, one of the crew, refused to obey the orders of John L. Murray, the second mate. A dispute ensued, which ended after Murray had sustained a severe wound in the left side of his neck with a clasp-knife that Robinson drew upon him. The vessel lay in the stream at the time of the occurrence, and Robinson was immediately seized and placed in irons until the arrival of the Harbor Police. He was then conveyed to the Tombs, and committed by Justice CONNOLLY on a charge of felonious assault. Murray is held in bail as a witness.

ROBBED BY HIS FELLOW-PASSENGERS.

John Tilden, who arrived here last Wednesday from England, made a complaint yesterday against Herbert Cramp, Wm. Hall, and James Williams, passengers by the same vessel, whom he charges with having robbed him of a watch. The accused were arrested, and held to answer the charge. Cramp had a slung-shot with him at the time of his apprehension, but he pleaded that in carrying it he was ignorant of violating the law.

BURGLARY BY A NEIGHBOR.

John Dawson and James McCarty took separate apartments at No. 120 East Twenty-eighth-street. On Wednesday night McCarty's premises were entered and $42 worth of wearing apparel was stolen. Suspecting Dawson to be guilty of the theft, McCarty caused his arrest just as he was about to leave for Albany by the boat, on Thursday evening. A portion of the property was found on the prisoner, who is in the Toombs awaiting examination on a charge of burglary.

Caution the public against the practice of some grocers, who purchase the printed bags in which our flour has been packed, refill them with other flour, and sell them as our manufacture. This fraud is punishable, and the guilty dealers may rely on being brought to justice, if they persist. A customer ought to suspect that some wrong use is intended, when the muslin bags are bought in this way, as they are never repurchased at the mills.

BURNETT'S COCOAINE.

TESTIMONIAL.
BOSTON, July 19, 1857.
MESSRS. J. BURNETT & CO.: I cannot refuse to state the salutary effect in my own aggravated case, of your excellent Hair-Oil—(Cocoaine.)
For many months my hair has been falling off, until I was fearful of losing it entirely. The skin upon my head became gradually more and more inflamed, so that I could not touch it without pain. This irritated condition I attributed to the use of various advertised hair washes, which I have since been told contain camphene spirit.
By the advice of my physician, to whom you had shown your process of purifying the Oil, I commenced its use the last week in June. The first application allayed the itching and irritation; in three or four days the redness and tenderness disappeared—the hair ceased to fall, and I have now a thick growth of new hair. I trust that others similarly afflicted, will be induced to try the same remedy, Yours very truly,
SUSAN R. POPE.
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.

A single application renders the hair (no matter how stiff and dry) soft and glossy for several days. It is conceded by all who have used it to be the best and cheapest Hair Dressing in the World.
Prepared by JOSEPH BURNETT & CO., Boston, and for sale by dealers generally at 50 cents a bottle.

Its action on the nervous system and reproductive organs, is most extraordinary, allaying all over excitement, and infusing into the nervous organization that degree of tension so requisite to give the human system the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. As an appetizer it is equally remarkable; assimilated with the gastric juices of the stomach, it assists them in readily dissolving all nutritious substances, and converting them into pure and wholesome blood; thus digestion is improved, and the whole framework of nerves on in a more vigorous and harmonious manner. Price $3 per bottle, or two bottles for $5. Principal office No. 208 Fulton-st., New-York.

HUNDREDS OF THE UNFORTUNATE are disappointed of a cure by not calling on DR. HUNTER at first, the Hunterian Dispensary, No. 3 Division-st., New-York City, established in 1834, for the Preservation of Human Life. PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—Dr. Hunter has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated not less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours. It roots out the poisonous taint the blood is sure to absorb, unless this remedy is used. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for nothing, that treats of the evil effects of early abuse and indulgence, is embellished with elaborate colored engravings, portraying every feature and phase of disease, exposes the fallacy of the ordinary modes adopted for the cure of local as well as hereditary maladies, and gives the only safe and infallible remedy for expunging every trace of the virus from the system.

SOUTHERN AGITATION.

CALL FOR A UNION MEETING IN NEW-YORK.

THE NORTH AND THE SOUTH—JUSTICE AND FRATERNITY.

The undersigned, regarding with just abhorrence the crimes of JOHN BROWN and his confederates, desire to unite with our fellow-citizens of New-York and vicinity, in a public and formal denunciation of that and all similar outrages, and to declare our unalterable purpose to stand by the Constitution in all its parts, as interpreted by the Supreme Court of the United States; and we hereby denounce as unpatriotic and untrue, revolutionary and dangerous, the idea of an irrepressible conflict existing between the two great sections of our beloved Union. On the contrary, we maintain that the North and South were created for each other; that there is a natural and necessary affinity between them, by parentage, history, religion, language, and geographical position; and that even their different climates, and different forms of industry, add strength to this bond of union, by enabling them to supply each other's wants. And we hereby solemnly pledge ourselves, from this hour, by our influence, our example, our votes, and by every other proper means, to discountenance and oppose SECTIONALISM in all its forms. Those of our fellow-citizens who share these sentiments with us, are requested to join us in a public expression of the same, at such time and place as shall be designated by the Committee.

JAMES W. BEEKMAN, JAMES T. SOUTTER,
WALTER SHERMAN, WILSON G. HUNT,
M. MORGAN, E. E. MORGAN,
GERARD HALLOCK, BENJ. M. WHITLOCK,
WM. H. APPLETON, JAMES BROOKS,
SAM'L L. M. BARLOW, HENRY GRINNELL,
JOSHUA J. HENRY, ALEX. T. STEWART,
New-York, Dec. 9, 1859. Committee.

The above call was agreed on and signed last evening by the Committee appointed to make arrangements for a public meeting, to express the sentiments of our citizens on the subject of the recent outrage in Virginia, and on other matters touching our relations and duties toward the South. In other respects, also, the Committee have made good progress. They are to meet again on Monday evening.

The date of the public meeting is not yet fixed precisely, but it will be held in the course of a few days —say by the 20th at farthest.

SHARP LANGUAGE OF A SOUTHERN RIGHTS ASSOCIATION.

An adjourned meeting of the "Central Southern Rights Association" of Richmond, Va., was held Dec. 7, when a formal organization was effected, and a memorial to the Legislature adopted. The memorial is drawn in strong language, the following pleasant items being among the recommendations it suggests to the Legislature:

1. To discriminate in such a manner against the manufactures and productions of all States in which the Abolitionists are tolerated, or laws exist for the purpose of preventing directly, or indirectly, the execution of the Fugitive Slave law, as to expel them eventually from the State of Virginia, and to encourage by every means in your power our foreign commerce, and commerce with the other Southern States, and domestic manufactures.

2. To lay such burdens upon vessels coming from any of the States above mentioned as will eventually drive them from our waters.

4. To provide that tampering with slaves, with a view to induce them to abscond, shall be punishable by death, and that a person accused of tampering with slaves, and advising them to abscond, or to rebel, or make insurrection, or of uttering seditious language, or language approving abolition of Slavery, may be tried forthwith before two magistrates and a jury, and, if convicted, that the sentence be executed without delay.

5. That the citizens of the States before mentioned shall be denied the privilege of suing in the Courts of Virginia.

6. That the citizens of other States who shall enter into combination anywhere, or stimulate others to enter into combinations to disturb Virginia in any manner, because of the existence of Slavery, or to interfere in any manner with her slaves, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and demanded for trial in her courts, and, if not surrendered, that retaliatory measures may be resorted to.

7. That all peddlers and drumming agents of Northern non-slaveholding States be expelled from Virginia by proper penalties, until the States from which they come shall by proper laws suppress all attempts at abolition.

NO PARDON FOR COOK OR OTHER INSURGENTS.

The following action of the Virginia Legislature, refusing to reprieve the remaining prisoners at Charlestown, has been already noticed in our dispatches.

In the House, Dec. 7, Mr. KEMPER moved:

Whereas, The Circuit Court of the County of Jefferson, in the exercise of its judicial functions, hath condemned certain persons to be executed on the 16th inst., for treason, murder and other crimes, and it having been provided by law that the Governor shall not grant a pardon to any person convicted of treason against the Commonwealth except with the consent of the General Assembly, declared by joint resolution, and the Governor having informed the Legislature that he will not interfere with the sentence of the Court, except in accordance with legislative action,

Resolved, By the General Assembly, that the said sentence is deemed plainly right, and that no interposition of the authority of this Legislature is deemed necessary or proper to delay the execution of the sentence of the Court as pronounced upon the said persons.

Several members addressed the House on the grave topic of this resolution, expressing full determination that whenever the foes of the South invade our homes, determined and effective action should be at all times taken by Virginians to repel such onslaught from fanatics or robbers. Pending the remarks, a message was announced from the Senate (as reported in the Senate proceedings) to the House, bearing upon the invasion of Virginia at Harper's Ferry. On motion, a joint Committee of seven members from the Senate and thirteen from the House, was appointed to consider the business causes, &c., and report thereon touching the invasion at Harper's Ferry. The subject was warmly spoken on, and the resolutions bearing thereon were unanimously carried.

THE CHARLESTOWN PRISONERS.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

CHARLESTOWN, VA., Wednesday, Dec. 7, 1859.

In a few weeks a detailed statement compiled from JOHN BROWN'S own letters, will be published, which will clearly demonstrate that the would-be Sa.nt is not only a murderer and a horse-thief, but a most uncompromising liar.

This morning Capt. AVIS will inform the prisoners that they need not entertain any further hope of pardon. The effect will be apparent, for despite COOK'S boasts, in his letters to Northern friends in his family correspondence, he frequently alludes to "Executive clemency."

STEVENS, in a letter to a friend, thus defines his religious creed: "I am a firm believer in the teachings of THEODORE PARKER, of Boston, and also in the spiritual theory of a life hereafter. Spiritualism is a great thing to sustain me in this hour, for how good it is to think that if I die, I shall meet with near and dear friends who have gone before, and there to go on progressing forever." I have corrected his orthography, which is extremely bad, showing him to be a most illiterate man.

THE EXAMINATION OF "REALF."

From the States and Union, Dec. 8.

The examination of TEMPEST, supposed to be REALF, in Alexandria, originally fixed for yesterday morning, was postponed, at the request of the prisoner, until Saturday morning next, to enable him to obtain evidence whereby to relieve himself of the suspicion which, from his recent movements, has justly attached to him. He says he will be able to show, on the examination, such facts as would fully release him from suspicion of complicity with the Harper's Ferry affair. It is said that COOK has recently sent to some of the Justices of Alexandria County a description of REALF, BROWN'S Secretary of State, which corresponds in some but differs in other particulars with the personal appearance of TEMPEST. COOK describes REALF'S hair as black. TEMPEST'S hair is very light. It is now believed that the prisoner is the runaway son of respectable English parents, and that his name is FINNY.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF THE GOVERNOR OF ALABAMA.

Gov. MOORE, of Alabama, delivered a short inaugural address on assuming office, Dec. 1, directing his remarks chiefly to the question of Slavery. He is ready for a dissolution of the Union at any moment.

After discussing, in general terms, the question of Slavery in the Territories, and the relations of the Federal and State authority, the Governor broaches the Harper's Ferry affair and proceeds to dilate as follows:

Having made a brief and true statement of facts, which shows a rapid and fearful increase of the power of the Black Republicans, and having discussed and shown the dangerous tendency of the new issue, growing out of the Slavery question, we are naturally led to ask, what is the duty of the slaveholding States under the circumstances? I can only give you my opinion. They should do everything that becomes them as patriots to preserve their rights and equality in the Union. They should insist on all their constitutional rights and grant the same to every section of the Union, and make no compromise of principles involving constitutional rights. If they have been taught anything by experience, it is, that by compromises and concessions on the question of Slavery, they have lost much and gained nothing. If, with the lights before them they continue to make concessions of constitutional rights, they will deserve the fate that will certainly overtake them. It is manifest that the Black Republicans intend to be satisfied with nothing short of the extermination of the institution of Slavery. The "irrepressible conflict" is going on, and has developed itself in a new form in the bloody tragedy at Harper's Ferry. The extent of this conspiracy, shows that what the Abolitionists cannot effect through the malfeasance or nonfeasance of Congress and the Territorial Legislatures, they intend to accomplish by conspiracy, violence and bloodshed. I repeat, then, let the Southern States stand firmly upon the Constitution, as the great platform upon which the Federal Government is erected, and under which their rights can alone be protected. Let it not be supposed from what I have said that I am a disunionist. No man is a disunionist who adheres strictly to the Constitution. There is no sacrifice I would not make to preserve the Union as our fathers made it. I should regard a dissolution as a great calamity, but if the alternative should be presented to the State of Alabama, of remaining in the Union an unequal or degraded member, or dissolving her connection with it, she should not hesitate to choose the latter alternative.

That there is a great danger of such an alternative being presented, we cannot doubt. The approaching Presidential election may test it. It is, therefore, the duty of the friends of the Constitution and equal rights, in every section of the Union, to unite to prevent the election of a Black Republican. That an overruling Providence will direct the public mind in the path of duty and patriotism, and carry us safely through the approaching crisis, is my sincere prayer.

COMMERCE NORTH AND SOUTH.

MOVEMENT OF EXPORTS FOR THE LAST FISCAL YEAR.

From the Constitution, Dec. 7.

We have thought it not inappropriate to give the exports for the last fiscal year, as furnished by the different sections of the Republic, in the hope that our common interest, so signally displayed by these figures, will arrest that aggressive spirit which is hastening all to one undistinguished ruin.

The exports of the last fiscal year, embracing specie and American produce, amounted to $335,894,385; in addition to which we also exported something over twenty millions of foreign produce, making all of our exports above $356,000,000, and exceeding our imports for the same period a fraction over $18,000,000.

The specie and American produce exported were	$335,894,385
Specie	57,502,305
The amount of produce consequently exported was	$278,392,080

We propose to classify the amount furnished by each section so far as possible, by giving the amount furnished exclusively by the Free States, the amount furnished by both the Free and Slave States, (which it is impossible to separate and designate the respective amount furnished by each,) and the amount furnished exclusively by the Slave States.

Free States exclusively:
Fisheries—embracing spermaceti and whale oils, dried and salt fish	$4,462,974
Coal	653,536
Ice	164,581
Total, Free States	5,281,091
Free and Slave States—
Products of the forest—embracing staves and headings, shingles, boards, plank, and scantling, hewn timber, other timber, oak bark, and other dye, all manufactures of wood, ashes, ginseng, skins, and furs	12,999,967
Product of agriculture—
Of animals—beef-tallow, hides, horned-cattle, butter, cheese, pork, hams and bacon, lard, wool, hogs, horses, mules, and sheep	15,540,917

Total, free and slave States	84,417,493
Slave States exclusively:
Cotton	161,434,923
Tobacco	21,074 038
Resin and Turpentine	3,564,416
Rice	2,207,148

RECAPITULATION.

Free States, exclusively	5,281,091
Free and Slave States	84,417,493
Slave States exclusively	188,693,496
Total	278,392,080

If any one will take the trouble to analyze the articles embraced in the amount of $84,417,493 belonging alike to the labor of the Free and Slave States, he will find that at least one-third is as justly the products of slave labor. We have therefore the fact that, out of $278,392,080 of exports of domestic industry over $200,000,000 of this sum is furnished by those States known as Slave States.

THE CLERGY OF THE NORTH, IN RELATION TO MATTERS AT THE SOUTH.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It seems desirable, in view of the present state of things in our country, that there should be some expression of opinion and feeling on the part of the clergy at the North, in unison with that contemplated by the meeting at the Lafarge House, and that uttered by the recent gathering in Boston. We cannot well bear any very decided part or testimony in such public demonstrations; and yet, when no small part of the mischief to be counteracted has been created by reverend agitators, male and female, it would seem peculiarly appropriate for the clergy, as a body, to do something in resisting the evil, for the sake of wiping off reproach from their own name, as well as for the general influence that might thereby be exerted. If it be so, that there is now real danger of disunion and bloodshed, there never was a time when the ministers of God were more loudly called upon to interpose with counsels of unity and peace; for what would a separation of our States be but the tearing of limbs from the living body, or the sanguinary feud of a family of brethren? I do not believe there is a Bishop, Presbyter or Deacon among all our Episcopal clergy at the North, who has any sympathy with the movements which have disturbed the South; and if disunion be before us, none of our clergy, North or South, will have had any share in causing it; and among other religious bodies there are thousands of ministers conservative, like our own. Now, if there could be any mode by which their sentiments could be expressed without mingling with the party strifes of the day, and simply declarative of our love for the Union, our abhorrence of such movements as we have recently witnessed, and our conviction that the South should be left to manage Slavery in its own way, with no restrictions but those of the Constitution and General Government, I believe it would draw forth a hearty response from thousands of the Clergy, and result in good. A few lines prepared by some of the leading divines in New-York, and circulated for signatures among their brethren, of different denominations, might answer the purpose; or a call for a meeting of the Clergy alone would, perhaps, do as well, though this latter mode would not find so full a response, and, moreover, such a meeting would be liable to the intrusion of radicals and agitators whom it is not pleasant to come in contact with, though well armed against them. All this, of course, is on the supposition that there is real danger impending to our Union; for, if there be, the call to avert it is one that should arouse the Clergy to bear their part in the work of prevention ere it be too late. RECTOR.

LITERARY AND ART ITEMS.

In a recent lecture delivered at Glasgow, Sir John Bowring having asserted that the lexicon of the Chinese language consists of 70 large volumes, M. Stanislaus Julien, Professor of Chinese at the College de France and the first Sinologist in Europe, has written to the Constitutionnel to point out Sir John's mistake. M. Julien states that, in reality, the Imperial Dictionary of the Emperor of Khang-hi, being that which all European students of Chinese use, is only of 32 volumes in 12mo, not thicker than the little finger, and containing only 42,718 characters. M. Julien asserts, moreover, that a knowledge of about one-tenth of these characters is sufficient to enable Chinese books to be understood, and that the Chinese language "is as clear as the easiest of modern languages"—the proof being, he says, that numerous Chinese works have been translated into French in the course of the last thirty years.

The eminent author and physician, Sir John Forbes, having lately suffered from severe illness, has intimated his intention of retiring from active life. On the 30th ult. the furniture of his house in London was sold by auction. Sir John has generously presented his very valuable medical library, numbering about 3,000 volumes, to the Marischal College, Aberdeen, where he received his early education. He graduated in medicine at Edinburgh in 1817.

It is rumored that a Mr. Betterton, a descendant of the Betterton, and a pupil of Mr. Young, is about to try his fortune on the stage; and it is further reported that a Mr. Mason, a relative of Mr. Charles Kemble, will shortly quit the pulpit and take to the sock and buskin. Rumor also states that Mr. T. P. Cooke has resolved on giving six farewell performances, and that they are to be genuine "final" ones.

Literature in Paris is quite as much influenced by "fashion" as are ladies' dresses. Since the success of Fanny a variety of romances have been published which go under the general title of "une étude de femme." M. E. Gourdon has just presented to the public a volume of this class, called Louise. The grave historian of the History of the Congress of Paris has written a book which is attracting much attention.

Mr. Cropsey, the American painter, so unfairly treated in last year's Academy Exhibition, says the Times, makes "act of presence" in the exhibition at Pall Mall by two Isle of Wight studies—a lovely little sunny view of the church at Bonchurch, and another of the lane, set in its [illegible] green—which all visitors to [illegible] gem of our Ieland gem, must remember.

The spacious hall of Sion College, the headquarters of the clergy of the Archdeaconry of London, has been thrown open for a series of addresses, to be delivered every week by gentlemen distinguished in the Church and State on subjects of general importance. Of these the Very Rev. the Dean of Westminster delivered the first, the subject being, "Some Hints in Reference to the Study of the Scriptures."

The statue of Richard I, the model of which was exhibited in 1851, in Hyde Park, and which became so familiar to visitors to the Great Exhibition held in that year, is about to be placed in Palace Yard, in the large open space opposite to the Peers' Entrance to the New Palace, Westminster. The statue, which is of gigantic proportions, is by Marochetti.

The public of Scotland, and particularly of the City of Edinburgh, have sustained a sad and serious loss in the death of Dr. George Wilson, the first Professor of Technology in the University of Edinburgh and Regius Keeper of the Industrial Museum.

During the late war in the Crimea the sale of the London Punch was interdicted throughout the Prussian States. On the petition of several "highly respectable citizens of the town of Berlin," this prohibition has now been repealed.

So great has been the demand for Dr. Cumming's remarkable book, The Great Tribulation, that upwards of 4,000 copies were immediately sold, and the demand for it increases every day.

Miss Evans, the authoress of Adam Bede, is engaged on a new novel, to be published, like Adam Bede, by the Messrs. Blackwoods, of Edinburgh.

Dr. Smiles, the author of The Life of George Stephenson, is engaged in writing a life of James Watt.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The festivities at Compiègne, neither the hunting by day nor the theatricals by night, seem to impede the Emperor's activity in business. Both peace and war occupy him by turns, and the agricultural movement, which has evidently become one of the sternest necessity to the well-being of the Empire, has shared of late the Imperial care and attention with the gun-boat operations about to be established on the Seine, at Poissy. The Paris folk will at last be enabled to enjoy to their soul's content the contemplation of the dangers and delights of a naval action. A redoubt has been erected by the Emperor's orders, and under his direction, at Poissy, within a Sunday trip of the Paris badaud, and the gun-boats from Toulon and Cherbourg are about to be brought up the Seine in order to practice their fire under the Emperor's eye. The point of Poissy has been chosen for its convenient proximity to Fontainebleau, whence the Emperor may visit the works and direct the experiments whenever it suits him. The time and study to be devoted to the implements of war do not, however, prevent His Majesty from following up with the most energetic perseverance and generous encouragement all the improvements in agricultural science presented to his notice. By Imperial order, an inquiry is to be made into the local requirements of the agricultural districts of France, and the means of bringing their local resources more generally into play.

The Journal du Havre relates the following determined act of self-destruction committed by a person residing in that town. A man of 58 had long been suffering from palpitation of the heart, for which he had been under medical treatment. A short time since an inflammation in his eyelids came on, which required the application of caustic, and after that operation had been performed the medical man again examined the state of his patient's chest, and by auscultation, became convinced of the gravity of the complaint under which he was laboring. On leaving the sick man's room he stopped in the adjoining one, and told the family of the hopeless state of the case. Although he spoke in a very low tone, his words reached the invalid, who immediately took up a large piece of lunar caustic which the doctor had left on the table and swallowed it. So determined was he to effect his purpose that in spite of his sufferings, he made no mention of what he had done until he felt assured that it was too late to apply a remedy. He died shortly after.

The Savannah (S. C.) Republican, of the 5th inst., says: "Friday night last, one O. S. Perry, who seems to have considered himself the proxy of the city for the practical maintenance of Southern rights, went to Mr. C. Chaffer's house, on South Broad-street, about half-past 8 o'clock, and told him that he (Chaffer) was an Abolitionist, and must leave town immediately if not sooner. After some further conversation, Perry left the house, and told Chaffer he must remain until he returned; and to prevent the door being locked during his absence, Perry unhinged it and carried it off on his back. While absent, Mr. Chaffer went to the barracks and informed against Perry, who was promptly arrested and brought before the Mayor, Saturday morning, and fined $20 for his patriotism. Mr. Perry will probably find it more profitable hereafter to attend to his own business, and leave the security of the city to the officers of the law."

The Portsmouth, Va., Transcript says that in October of last year, a gentleman picked up a letter in the road near Suffolk, directed to Capt. John Brown, that used to be. The document being sealed, and the finder having no knowledge of any such individual, left it at Mr. Wilson's shop, where it remained for a month or two. At last it was opened. The writer, whose name is not remembered, stated that he had ninety armed men in the Dismal Swamp who would be ready at any time to join him. The letter was perused by a number of persons at the time, but as no such character as John Brown was known, it excited no suspicion until the conspiracy at Harper's Ferry. This letter, adds the Transcript, should even now induce vigilance.

A correspondent of the Washington Intelligencer at Sebastopol, under the date of Oct. 30, writes as follows: "The sum of three million silver rubles has at last been appropriated for the relief of those who suffered loss of property during the late seige. Count STROGONOFF came in the steamer from Odessa on Sunday last to bring the glad tidings, and to make arrangements for the distribution of the funds. He brought with him one million nine hundred thousand rubles, and the payment will commence on the 1st of November, old style, the officers having the preference. Those in Sebastopol will receive 57 per cent, and those who lost property outside of Sebastopol, and in Simperofol, Eupatoria, Kertsch, &c., will be paid from 15 to 20 per cent."

It appears, from an investigation made by the inspector of the Scottish Union Insurance Company, that the cause of a recent explosion in a brewery at Edinburgh was the ignition of the flour or dust of the malt. The fire took place in the mill-loft, and, rushing up the iron tubes of the elevators into a large, close malleable-iron receiver in the brew house, the explosion took place from the air thus compressed meeting with a strong resistance. A remedy to prevent a similar occurrence has been applied, which is simply to admit air into the receiver, and prevent fire from coming in contact with the flour. It is important that this should be generally known to all brewers, distillers and millers using malt-mills, and who have unin closed gaslights in the mill-room.

Mr. Chubb, with reference to recent accidents, suggests that bullion-rooms on board ship,—now usually formed by lining some nook or corner with strong iron plates bolted to and forming part of the ship, so that if the vessel gets on shore and breaks up, the bullion-room necessarily goes to pieces with it, and the contents are dispersed,—should not be in any way connected with or fixed to the ship. In case of a wreck, and the breaking up of the vessel on shore, the safe would then go to the bottom, preserve its contents intact, and be readily recovered. As a safe four feet square will hold more than £1,000,000 sterling, very little space will be interfered with.

At the Alhambra Palace, London, an educated bull, who has received the distinguished appellative of "Don Juan," nightly displays some extraordinary feats. At the bidding of his master, Mr. Dan Castello, he leaps through hoops and over hurdles, rubs his nose upon the floor, kneels down, or limps about on three legs to imitate lameness, stands upon a pedestal in the most picturesque of attitudes, and finally permits himself to be hoisted on a shutter and so carried around the circus on the shoulders of a number of men, whom he views the while with an air of conscious dignity worthy of a county member on the day of his "chairing."

It is said that in Yorkshire, (Eng.,) there are ten packs of foxhounds, one pack of staghounds, and five or six harriers, equal in all to thirteen or fourteen packs of foxhounds. Thirteen packs of foxhounds, or fifty couples each—that is, 1,300 hounds—consume annually 200 tons of oatmeal, at a cost of £2,600, besides the carcases of about 2,000 dead horses. There are at least 1,000 hunting men in Yorkshire, keeping upon an average four horses each; 4,000 horses cost £200,000, at an average of £50 apiece, and their keep, at £50 per annum each, makes £200,000 more; 4,000 horses employ 2,000 men as grooms, and consume annually 40,000 quarters of oats, 2,000 quarters of beans, and 8,000 tons of hay.

The Great Eastern, says the Hampshire Guardian, is now becoming extremely smart in her outward appearance. The masts and funnels have been painted, the brass-work highly polished, the sails snugly stowed, and every rope hauled taut. A number of men belonging to the ship are now painting the hull. The space to be covered comprises an area of four acres. A large number of persons have lately visited the ship. Among the company was noticed the Prince de Joinville, who, since the commencement of the ship, appears to have taken a great interest in her. The work inside the ship has not yet been commenced.

A woman named Ann Coleman has been committed at Blaina to the Monmouth (Wales) assizes, for the very novel offence of having two husbands living with her at the same time—one being at the works in the day and the other on the night turn. Evidence of her first marriage at Wolverton, Somersetshire, eighteen years ago, at the age of 18, and of her recent marriage, within a few weeks of the present time, was produced, and the certificates were read. Her age was given in the last certificate at 24, which confirms the opinion of the male sex as to the difficulty of estimating a female year.

Galignani says: "Dr. Hartieng has successfully applied citric acid to the cure of rheumatism. Lemon juice had been recommended by Drs. Rees Dalrymple, Perkins and others; but that remedy is much more costly, whereas 20 grammes of citric acid, dissolved in 250 grammes of water, sweetened with from 75 to 100 grammes of syrup, may be administered in the course of from 15 to 36 hours, the affected part being wrapped up in wadding, and the patient being allowed to drink fresh water at discretion. A complete cure is generally obtained in the course of from ten to fifteen days."

An exhibition of wild beasts took place recently at Tuam, Ireland. An amusing incident occurred with the elephant, which put his trunk into the pocket of one of the bystanders and abstracted a small account-book contained therein. Before a rescue could be effected he dropped it into his capacious jaws, and had it instantly swallowed. One of the beasts bit the finger of his keeper.

The Springfield Republican relates that a Wilbraham woman, who believed in spiritualism and woman's rights, rigged herself out in Bloomer costume about a year ago and left her husband for parts unknown; but last week she returned a penitent and altered woman, having changed her uncouth garments for those more befitting to her sex.

A new process for the manufacture of submarine telegraph cables has been introduced by Messrs. Wells and Hall. Its chief peculiarities consist in the employment of pure india rubber instead of gutta percha, and in the coverings being braided so as to obviate effectually the liability of stretch or kink.

The Springfield Republican says that the old stage proprietors, agents, and drivers, who, twenty years ago, on the banks of the Connecticut, first commenced to lay aside the "whip and horn," to make room for the "bell and whistle," are to meet again in that city, on the 21st of December, and partake of an old-fashioned stage supper.

A man named Sandy Tate, a stone mason by trade, was tarred and feathered, ridden on a rail and had one side of his head shaved, in Salisbury, N. C., on Saturday last, for expressing violent Abolition sentiments. He had been living in the neighborhood several years.

Some Lord-Lieutenants, it seems, have thrown obstacles in the way of forming volunteer corps. Thus, when Mr. R. Barnett, of Meopham, Kent, offered to arm, clothe, and equip twenty-five men at his own expense, Lord Sidney refused the offer, and declared, it to be a "crude idea!"

Much excitement exists in Monmouth County because a woman, named Jane Van Brunt, who is missing, is supposed to have been murdered. Two men have been arrested on suspicion of killing her. About one hundred persons are searching the swamps and woods in the vicinity.

An old man, named Quinn, who many years ago was pastor of a church in one of the villages of New-England, and much respected and esteemed by all for his good qualities, was recently sentenced to the chain-gang for thirteen days, by the Recorder of Memphis, Tenn., on the charge of habitual drunkenness.

Lieut. Col. E. Peel writes as follows to the London Field:—"When out deer-stalking on Capt. Spicer's moor, in the Island of Lewis, on Monday last, the 10th inst., I fired, at 134 yards distance, at a stag, and killed him and two hinds at the same shot. The ball passed through all three, killing them dead on the spot."

ASTHMA.—A distinguished Lawyer writes from Augusta, Maine, as follows: "When I commenced taking Jonas Whitcomb's Remedy for Asthma, I had been affected with that disease nearly twenty years. It is of the spasmodic kind; in a bad attack I have frequently sat up sixteen nights in succession. Soon after taking the Remedy, I found an unaccustomed relief; my health and strength began to improve; I have gained twenty pounds in weight, and have comparatively no Asthma. It seems to me that the very foundation of my disease is broken up, and that it will soon entirely leave me."

FRIDAY, Dec. 9—P. M.

The improvement in the Stock Market noticed yesterday continued to-day. The printed sales are not so heavy in amount, but some of the Share prices have further advanced, and the general market closes firm this afternoon. On the State list, Missouris were a fraction weaker in the forenoon on the telegraphic advice from Washington in the TIMES of this morning, that the State will be disappointed in settling her claim against the Federal Treasury of about $450,000 in season for the January interest. The stand taken by the Attorney-General of the United States is, no doubt, a disappointment, but after due inquiry today we see no reason to doubt that other and abundant funds will be found in the Bank of Commerce in this City to pay all the State coupons due 1st of January. About one-half the amount falls upon the Pacific Railway Company, main line, and the Hannibal and St. Joseph Company, both which have their lines completed and in profitable operation, and both in good credit. The other half for the poorer or unfinished roads, will be cared for by the State, whose Treasurer has the means and power of insuring the prompt transmission of the whole to New-York. In the afternoon the Missouri Stock recovered to 83 ⅌ cent.; same as yesterday. Virginias were steady at 92½ ⅌ cent. The suggestions of Gov. WISE, to confine the payment of interest, as far as practicable, to Richmond, and to grant $5,000,000 additional aid to the Internal Improvements for Companies who have not yet completed their undertakings, have not been favorably received in the market, and these, and not the Harper's Ferry excitement, have damaged the stock 1@2 ⅌ cent. We presume the State authorities will not attempt to change their contract with the present Coupon Bondholders, to pay the interest in New-York and London. The Governor of Kentucky, in his message on Monday last, places the Public Debt of the Commonwealth,

Due from 1860 to 1875, at	$4,773,000
Of which to Board of Education	1,381,000
Total held by the public	$3,392,000
